DM-to-DM: Understanding the Infinite Mansion

Introduction

Welcome, Dungeon Master, to the Infinite Mansion—a labyrinth of mystery, danger, and wonder that defies all logic and known reality. This modular, room-based adventure is designed to be flexible, allowing you to run it as a full campaign, a one-shot, or seamlessly insert individual rooms into your ongoing game.

The Infinite Mansion is not a singular place; it does not exist in any one reality. It is a living entity, a shifting extradimensional space that hunts for those who dare to enter. Some say it was built by The Architect, an enigmatic figure whose motivations remain unclear. Others claim it is a fractured realm, where lost histories, forgotten relics, and cursed beings are drawn together. Whatever its true origin, one thing is certain—once you step inside, the Mansion decides your fate.

How Players Enter the Mansion

Unlike traditional dungeons or adventure locations, the Infinite Mansion has no fixed entrance. Instead, the Mansion finds the players in moments of transition, often when they least expect it.

Possible Entry Scenarios

- A Lone Manor on the Hill – The party sees a grand, unfamiliar mansion where no such building stood before. Lights flicker invitingly in its windows.
- The Ordinary Door – A well-known tavern door opens to reveal an entirely different interior. The players step through—only for the door to disappear behind them.
- A Portal of Mist – Thick fog rolls in, swallowing the road ahead. When it clears, the party finds themselves standing in a dimly lit chamber, surrounded by impossible architecture.
- A Familiar Place, Changed – They leave their rooms at an inn only to find the hallway stretches into infinity, the wood-paneled walls giving way to the cold marble of the Mansion.
- The Forgotten Invitation – A letter arrives for them, sealed in black wax. It bears only one message:
  "You have been summoned. The doors will open."

No matter how they enter, there is no way back the way they came. The Mansion only allows exit when it chooses.

Navigating the Mansion: The D20 Portal Shift Rule

The Infinite Mansion has no hallways, staircases, or doors in the conventional sense. Instead, every room is a standalone realm connected through unstable portals that open upon resolving the challenge within. The room the players enter next is never predictable—not even to the Dungeon Master.

How It Works

Once the challenge in a room is completed—whether through combat, puzzle-solving, negotiation, or sheer luck—a portal manifests, shimmering and unstable. Where it leads is determined by the following mechanic:

Step 1: Roll 1d20 to Determine Direction

- Odd Roll → Move backward in the room sequence.
- Even Roll → Move forward in the room sequence.
- Natural 20 → The portal ejects them back outside the Mansion (if appropriate).
- Natural 1 → The portal malfunctions, sending them somewhere extremely dangerous or into an already completed room—changed.

Step 2: Roll 1d12 to Determine Distance

- The result of this roll determines how many pages forward or backward they move.
- This means they could move as little as 1 room or as many as 12!

This mechanic ensures that the Dungeon Master does not need to pre-plan the room order, keeping exploration unpredictable and exciting.

How the Rooms Work

Each room within the Infinite Mansion is a self-contained challenge designed to provide an engaging, immersive experience. While every room is unique, they all follow the same structural principles:

1. Entering from the Outside

Every room includes an entry scenario, allowing you to drop the room into an existing adventure at any time. The players may enter from:

- A sudden shift in reality (e.g., stepping into a room that shouldn't exist).
- A magical or cursed doorway that leads to the Mansion.
- A failed teleportation spell that reroutes them here instead.

2. DM Read-Aloud Description

A richly detailed scene-setting passage designed to immerse players in the atmosphere of the room. It describes:

- The sensory details (sights, sounds, smells, and unnatural feelings).
- Any immediate, obvious threats or points of interest.
- The architecture, decor, and environmental anomalies of the space.

3. Room Features & Interactive Elements

Each room is designed with unique environmental storytelling. This section highlights:

- Hazards and dangers the players will need to navigate.
- Strange objects or magical effects that alter the way the room functions.
- Recurring elements that connect this room to other parts of the Mansion.

4. Running the Room (Combat & Puzzle Options)

Every room includes multiple ways to engage:

- A combat scenario that triggers under certain conditions.
- A puzzle or exploration challenge that players may attempt instead.
- Guidance for the DM on running both approaches effectively.

5. Loot & Treasures

Each room contains magical items, knowledge, or artifacts, some of which:

- Come with curses or side effects that deepen the mystery.
- Tie into recurring storylines across the Mansion.
- Provide valuable tools for later encounters.

6. The Portal Out & Linked Rooms

Once the challenge is completed, the portal forms, leading to a new room determined by the D20 Portal Shift Rule. Some rooms have soft links to others—NPCs, artifacts, and recurring phrases that hint at hidden connections between seemingly random chambers.

Using the Mansion as a Full Adventure vs. Standalone Rooms

The Infinite Mansion can be run in two primary ways:

Option 1: A Full Adventure

The players are trapped within the Mansion and must navigate its rooms to find an escape. They may uncover The Architect's hidden secrets, piece together fragments of lost lore, or seek out the legendary Heart of the Mansion—a room said to grant one wish but at a terrible price.

Option 2: Standalone Rooms in an Existing Campaign

Because of the instant transportation mechanic, any room can be:

- A pocket dimension hidden in a wizard's tower.
- A dreamlike trap within an artifact.
- A punishment from a god or otherworldly entity.
- A mysterious place that appears just once—then vanishes forever.

You can drop any room into your campaign with no setup, using the entry scenario and portal mechanic to transition players in and out as needed.

Final Notes for the DM

- The Mansion is unpredictable. Embrace the randomness of room placement!
- Players will begin to recognize patterns. Let them theorize—but never confirm or deny their suspicions.
- Recurring NPCs and clues should feel organic. They should seem like memories bleeding through reality, not forced connections.
- If a room repeats, change it. Alter small details to make it feel subtly wrong the second time around.
- No one has ever mapped the full Mansion. And perhaps, no one ever will.

Welcome to the Infinite Mansion. The doors are open. Are your players ready to step inside?

The Portal Out (D20 Portal Shift Rule)

Once the challenge is resolved, a portal activates—but its destination remains unknown.

Step 1: Roll 1d20 to Determine Direction

- Odd Roll → Move backward in the room sequence.
- Even Roll → Move forward in the room sequence.
- Natural 20 → The portal ejects them back outside the mansion.
- Natural 1 → The portal malfunctions, sending them somewhere extremely dangerous.

Step 2: Roll 1d12 to Determine Distance

- The result of this roll determines how many pages forward or backward they move.
- This means they could move as little as 1 room or as many as 12!

Room 1: The Candlelit Wake

Where the dead whisper, and the living listen.

Entering from the Outside

The scent of melted wax lingers in the air as you step forward. Your surroundings shift—what was once a cobbled street, a forest path, or a well-lit hallway fades into an oppressive gloom. You now stand before a massive oak door, cracked slightly ajar. A single candle flickers just beyond the threshold, casting long, distorted shadows against the walls.

As you enter, the heavy door groans shut behind you, sealing with an audible click. Ahead, an endless row of wooden pews stretches into the darkness. Dozens of candles flicker upon a massive iron chandelier, their dim glow illuminating a raised dais where an ornate coffin rests, its lid partially open.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"You find yourselves in a long, cathedral-like hall, the air thick with the scent of old wax and dry wood. Hundreds of candles line the pews, their flames wavering without a breeze. At the far end, atop a raised stone dais, rests a grand coffin—its lid slightly askew, revealing darkness within. A low murmur ripples through the chamber, indistinct voices whispering, though no figures are present. The flames of the candles dance in unnatural rhythms, flickering in time with the whispers, as if the room itself is breathing."

Room Description

- Endless Candlelight: The room is dimly lit by thousands of candles, yet no wax drips. The flames never extinguish.
- The Coffin: A grand, blackwood coffin lies atop a chiseled stone altar, its lid ajar. The inside is pitch black, even in the candlelight.
- Mourning Benches: Wooden pews line the hall, carved with names that change when read aloud.
- Ethereal Whispers: The air hums with distant, unintelligible voices, growing clearer when the players speak aloud.

NPC & Interactive Elements

- The Whispering Dead: The voices belong to those who once dwelled in the Mansion. They can offer hints or cryptic warnings.
- The Forgotten Name: A player who reads a name on the pew aloud hears it whispered in their own voice later.
- The Coffin's Occupant: Something waits inside the coffin, but it does not move unless disturbed.

DM Guidance:

Combat Option – The Waking Dead

- Trigger: If players open the coffin or disrupt the candles.
- Enemy: The Sleeper, an undead entity tied to the Mansion's foundation.
- Combat Mechanics:
  - Each turn, candles snuff out, reducing visibility.
  - The Sleeper drains warmth, imposing Constitution saving throws (DC 14) to avoid exhaustion.

Puzzle Option – The Mourner's Riddle

- Trigger: If players investigate the pews or listen to the whispers.
- Solution: The coffin only opens safely when a player whispers their own name into it.
- Hints:
    - The whispers grow louder when the players say their names aloud.
    - The name on the pews changes to match whoever reads them.

Combat/Encounter Mechanics:

- The Sleeper (AC 14 | HP 40 | Necrotic Touch: 2d6 necrotic damage, drains warmth).
- Every round, a candle extinguishes, making the room darker and colder.
- A successful Religion or Insight check (DC 16) reveals that the Sleeper was once the Mansion's first architect.

Loot & Treasures

Upon solving the puzzle or defeating The Sleeper, the coffin collapses into dust, revealing:

1 The Emberlight Candle (Magical Trinket) Guidance)

- Description: A candle that never burns out and flickers in the presence of ghosts.
- Effect: Allows the holder to hear whispers from beyond the grave once per long rest.
- Curse: The candle's flame flickers wildly when in danger, but this does not mean it can prevent harm.

2 Veil of the Mourned (Enchanted Cloak)

- Description: A dark, wispy funeral shroud that shifts like living smoke.
- Effect: Grants advantage on Stealth checks in dim light or darkness.
- Curse: The wearer's reflection does not appear in mirrors.

How Players Obtain These Items

- Emberlight Candle: Found within the coffin's remains after resolving the challenge.
- Veil of the Mourned: Draped over a pew, only visible after the Sleeper is defeated.

Room 2: The Wailing Sepulcher

Where the walls remember the dead, and the dead remember you.

Entering from the Outside

A cold wind cuts through the air as you take another step. The road beneath your feet is gone, replaced by uneven stone. Ahead, an arched iron gate stands half-open, flanked by two weathered statues of hooded figures. Beyond it, an ancient mausoleum looms, its entrance shrouded in mist.

The moment you step inside, the outside world vanishes. The air is thick with the scent of damp stone and decaying flowers. A tunnel of carved crypt walls stretches forward, their surfaces lined with names—some written in languages you don't recognize. Faint sobbing echoes through the chamber, though no figures are in sight.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"The chamber is suffocatingly still. Walls of carved tombs stretch high above, their names barely legible in the flickering torchlight. The scent of mildew and old stone clings to the air, damp and heavy. Somewhere deeper in the sepulcher, a long, keening wail rises and falls, as if carried on an unseen wind. The torches flicker, casting elongated shadows across the crypt walls. And then—just for a moment—you hear your own name whispered among the wailing."

Room Description

- Tomb-Lined Walls: Hundreds of crypt alcoves line the chamber, some cracked open, revealing empty spaces.
- The Sobbing Hall: The further players go, the clearer the sobbing sound becomes, but there is no visible source.
- The Forgotten Plaque: A stone plaque at the far end of the chamber bears an inscription that shifts as it is read.
- Flickering Torches: The torches occasionally flicker violently, causing shadows to lurch unnaturally.

NPC & Interactive Elements

- The Wailing Specter: A translucent figure drifts through the crypt, sobbing but vanishing when approached.
- The Forgotten Names: If a player reads a name aloud, the walls whisper it back to them later.
- The Mourner's Lament: An unseen voice asks the players why they have come—but only responds in riddles.

DM Guidance: Running the Room

Combat Option – The Sepulcher Guardian

- Trigger: If players disturb the crypts or attempt to take anything.
- Enemy: The Guardian Wraith, a spirit bound to protect the dead.
- Combat Mechanics:
  - The Wraith phases through walls, attacking from unexpected angles.
  - Every time the Wraith strikes a player, their name is carved into a nearby tomb.

Puzzle Option – The Mourner's Riddle

- Trigger: If players engage with the shifting inscription on the plaque.
- Solution: The plaque reveals a message only when a player places their hand upon an empty tomb slot.
- Hints:
  - The shifting inscription becomes clearer when whispered to.
  - The wailing specter pauses its sobbing when players speak their own names aloud.

Combat/Encounter Mechanics:

- Guardian Wraith (AC 15 | HP 50 | Necrotic Claw: 2d8 necrotic damage, reduces maximum HP temporarily).
- It takes half damage from non-magical attacks and is resistant to radiant magic.
- A successful Religion or History check (DC 17) reveals that the Guardian was once a servant of the Mansion's original owner.

Loot & Treasures

Upon solving the puzzle or defeating the Guardian Wraith, a hidden alcove slides open, revealing:

1 Mourner's Tearstone (Magical Gem)

- Description: A glistening black gemstone that shimmers faintly in candlelight.
- Effect: When held, it allows the user to see and hear spirits that normally cannot be perceived for one minute per long rest.
- Curse: The bearer occasionally hears whispered voices in total silence, even whe alone.

2 Wraithbone Ring (Enchanted Item)

- Description: A ring made of pale, ghostly bone, faintly cold to the touch.
- Effect: Grants advantage on saving throws against fear effects.
- Curse: The wearer always leaves faint footprints, even when invisible.

How Players Obtain These Items

- Mourner's Tearstone: Found embedded in the Forgotten Plaque after resolving the riddle.
- Wraithbone Ring: Slipped from the Guardian Wraith's incorporeal form after its defeat.

Room 3: The Hollow Choir

Where the music plays long after the musicians are gone.

Entering from the Outside

The sound of distant singing echoes faintly through the air, though no voices can be seen. Your surroundings blur, and suddenly, you find yourself stepping across a polished marble floor. A pair of towering wooden doors, carved with angelic figures covering their faces, creak open before you.

Beyond them lies a grand, abandoned choir hall. The scent of old parchment and dust lingers in the still air. Wooden choir pews stand in perfect rows, though their seats are empty. At the front of the room, an elaborate organ sits untouched, its keys pristine despite the passage of time.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"A long, echoing chamber stretches before you, lined with towering pews that rise like silent sentinels. Golden candelabras flicker, their flames casting an unnatural glow on the polished floor. The air is unnervingly silent—too silent—except for the faintest strains of music, drifting as if from nowhere. At the far end of the chamber, an enormous organ looms, its black and ivory keys pristine. The sheet music upon the stand is blank, yet the air hums with an unfinished melody. A whisper passes by your ear—no words, just the sensation of a presence watching, waiting."

Room Description

- Phantom Choir: Though the pews are empty, the sound of distant voices rises and falls, as if rehearsing an unseen performance.
- The Silent Organ: An ornate instrument rests at the front of the chamber, its keys playing soft notes when no one is looking.
- The Blank Sheet Music: A single sheet of parchment sits upon the organ's stand—its notes fade from view when read aloud.
- Faint Echoes: Occasionally, the sound of footsteps moves between the pews, though nothing is there.

NPC & Interactive Elements

- The Vanished Maestro: A shadowy figure appears briefly when music is played, lingering only long enough to turn a single page of invisible sheet music.
- The Forgotten Melody: If a player hums along with the phantom choir, the song changes to match their thoughts.
- The Empty Seats: Sitting in a choir pew makes the player hear distant applause, though no audience exists.

DM Guidance: Running the Room

Combat Option – The Cursed Musicians

- Trigger: If players attempt to play the organ incorrectly or disrespect the music.
- Enemy: The Hollow Choir, spectral musicians bound to their final performance.
- Combat Mechanics:
  - The Choir attacks in harmony, causing psychic damage (2d6 per note played).
  - The organ's keys begin playing on their own, forcing Wisdom saves (DC 15) against enchantment.

Puzzle Option – The Lost Requiem

- Trigger: If players interact with the organ without playing recklessly.
- Solution: The correct song must be played entirely, requiring successful Arcana (DC 15) or Performance (DC 12) checks.
- Hints:
    - A successful History check (DC 14) reveals that the Mansion's original owner commissioned a lost requiem.
    - The Vanished Maestro gestures toward a specific section of the invisible sheet music when the players watch closely.

Combat/Encounter Mechanics:

- The Hollow Choir (AC 13 | HP 45 | Harmonic Screech: 2d6 psychic damage, causes disorientation).
- Each round, the music grows louder, imposing disadvantage on Perception checks.
- A successful Insight check (DC 16) reveals that the Choir only attacks if the song is disrupted.

Loot & Treasures

Upon completing the puzzle or defeating the Hollow Choir, the organ releases a final note, revealing:

1 Maestro's Tuning Fork (Magical Item)

- Description: A delicate silver tuning fork etched with shifting notes.
- Effect: When struck, it allows the wielder to hear the true emotions of a spoken lie.
- Curse: The user occasionally hears whispered music that no one else perceives.

2 The Silent Score (Mystical Sheet Music)

- Description: A blank sheet of parchment that reveals its notes only when played upon an instrument.
- Effect: Once per long rest, playing the music grants advantage on Persuasion checks for 1 hour.
- Curse: If the music is played incorrectly, the player hears a sorrowful wail from an unseen audience.

How the Players Obtain Items

- Maestro's Tuning Fork: Appears upon the organ's stand after solving the puzzle.
- The Silent Score: Found ina hidden compartment beneath the organ bench.

Room 4: The Veil of Echoes

Where lost voices whisper secrets that were never meant to be heard.

Entering from the Outside

You blink, and the world around you shifts. The hallway you were walking down is gone, replaced by an unsettling void of pale mist. The floor beneath your feet is solid, yet it does not feel like stone or wood—more like the surface of a frozen lake, smooth and unnaturally reflective. The air crackles with static energy, and whispers rise all around you, yet no figures appear in the swirling haze. Ahead, ghostly veils of gossamer fabric drift, suspended in mid-air, twisting as if caught in a breeze that does not exist. The moment you step forward, the mist parts, revealing the shadowy outline of a chamber beyond.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"The room ahead is like nothing you've seen before. Walls do not define its boundaries—only an endless stretch of pale mist that ripples like water when disturbed. Wisps of cloth, like forgotten veils, twist and drift around you, brushing lightly against your skin. The moment you inhale, distant whispers fill your ears—fragments of voices speaking in hushed, urgent tones, as though sharing secrets from a world long lost.
The floor beneath you is impossibly smooth, reflecting faint silhouettes moving within the mist. Some match your own steps perfectly. Others... do not."

Room Description

- Floating Veils: Wisps of fabric drift through the air, brushing against players before dissolving.
- The Mirror-Like Floor: The ground reflects not just those in the room, but shadows of unknown figures.
- The Whispering Mist: Indistinct voices speak of forgotten memories, some mentioning the players by name.
- Echoed Steps: Occasionally, the sound of footsteps approaches from behind, but no one is there.

NPC & Interactive Elements

- The Weeping Silhouette: A faceless figure appears briefly in the mist, whispering a name only one player recognizes.
- The Lost Confession: A voice murmurs a secret tied to one of the players, though it is unclear if it is past or future.
- The Hidden Rift: A barely perceptible tear in the mist leads somewhere else entirely, but only those who step through can see where it goes.

DM Guidance:

Combat Option – The Shadow Echoes

- Trigger: If players attempt to silence the whispers or disturb the veils.
- Enemy: Echo Shades, phantoms formed from the lost voices trapped in the mist.
- Combat Mechanics:
  - The Echo Shades do not attack physically, but instead attempt to drain memories (DC 14 Wisdom saves).
  - Players who fail a save forget something important, temporarily losing a skill proficiency until they leave the room.

Puzzle Option – Unraveling the Whispered Truth

- Trigger: If players listen carefully to the whispers.
- Solution: The voices weave a fragmented riddle, which must be completed by repeating a phrase found on the veil.
- Hints:
    - A successful Perception check (DC 13) allows a player to hear one voice clearly.
    - One veil has a phrase embroidered in faded gold, though it flickers in and out of sight.

Combat/Encounter Mechanics:

Room 5: The Sepulcher of Forgotten Names

Where the dead are remembered, but the living are forgotten.

Entering from the Outside

As you take another step, the familiar world around you dissolves like dust on the wind. You now stand before a heavy stone door, engraved with thousands of names—some etched so deeply that they seem fresh, others worn away into illegibility. The door shudders open with a groan, revealing a chamber of endless tombstones and solemn candlelight. The moment you cross the threshold, a sensation washes over you—your name, your identity, feels distant, as if slipping from your memory. The flickering candlelight wavers unnaturally, casting shadows where none should be.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"A grand mausoleum stretches into the distance, lined with towering stone tablets inscribed with thousands of names. The room is vast, the air heavy with dust and candle smoke. Despite the stillness, faint whispers drift between the graves, each one murmuring a name. At the far end of the hall, an ancient podium stands, a single unmarked stone slab resting upon it.
The deeper you move into the sepulcher, the more the whispers intensify. And then—just as your footfalls echo against the stone—your name is spoken among them, not by your companions, but by something else."

Room Description

- Endless Tombstones: Each stone is carved with a name, though some shift and change when read aloud.
- The Murmuring Candles: Rows of black candles flicker and whisper softly, their flames bending toward the players as they move.
- The Forgotten Slab: A massive, blank gravestone rests upon a podium, its surface slowly forming letters the longer one stares.

Room 6: The Widow's Parlor

Where grief lingers, and the past refuses to be buried.

Entering from the Outside

The air turns thick with the scent of aged perfume and old wood as the space around you shifts. The hallway fades, replaced by the dim glow of candlelight through heavy velvet curtains. You now stand before an intricately carved door, its wood inlaid with silver patterns of roses and skeletal hands entwined in mourning.

A quiet sob echoes from within. The door creaks open on its own, revealing a grand sitting room. A fireplace flickers weakly, its embers barely clinging to life. A high-backed chair faces the hearth, occupied by a veiled figure draped in mourning black.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"The parlor is suffocatingly still, the only sounds the faint crackling of dying embers and the occasional rustle of heavy curtains shifting despite the absence of wind. The furniture is exquisite but old—couches and chairs covered in a fine layer of dust, as if no one has sat in them for years. The walls are lined with portraits of solemn-eyed people, their expressions sorrowful, their gazes always seeming to follow you.

A faint sob escapes from the veiled woman sitting in the grand chair by the fire. She does not move, yet you feel her presence pressing down upon the room, heavy with something unspoken."

Room Description

- The Mourning Veil: The woman seated in the chair does not respond unless spoken to. Her veil is impossibly black, absorbing all light.
- Portraits of the Departed: The paintings on the walls shift subtly when no one is looking, their faces warping into skeletal grins or sorrowful expressions.

Room 7: The Rippling Wake

Where the water remembers, and the past refuses to sink.

Entering from the Outside

The path beneath you darkens, and with an unexpected step, your foot splashes into cold water. Looking down, the ground is gone, replaced by dark, rippling liquid stretching in all directions. The world around you distorts, shifting like a reflection in an unsteady pool. When your vision clears, you stand ankle-deep in a flooded chamber.

The water is ice-cold. Despite the depth never rising above your knees, the surface remains eerily still—until something moves beneath it. The sound of slow dripping echoes endlessly, though no droplets fall from the ceiling. In the distance, a wooden rowboat bobs gently, untouched by the ripples that disturb the rest of the pool.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"The chamber is vast, its far walls barely visible through the mist that clings to the water's surface. Ancient pillars rise from the flood, their carvings worn smooth by time. Floating candles drift aimlessly, their flames undisturbed despite the damp air. Something moves below. A shape—long and thin—glides silently beneath the water, vanishing before it can be fully seen. Then, from somewhere unseen, a voice calls out... muffled, garbled, as if drowning in the depths."

Room 8: The Sighing Halls

Where the walls remember every breath you take.

Entering from the Outside

The path ahead twists unexpectedly, and you suddenly find yourself at the threshold of a long, dimly lit corridor. The walls are lined with aged, wooden panels, each carved with intricate swirling patterns that seem to shift when not directly observed. A low, rhythmic sighing fills the air, neither wind nor voice but something in between—a deep exhale echoing from the unseen depths of the hall.

As you step forward, the sound changes, aligning with your own breath. The walls breathe with you, drawing you deeper into the corridor where unseen forces whisper just beneath the surface.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"The hallway stretches impossibly long, its wooden panels etched with swirling carvings that shift and distort when glimpsed from the corner of your eye. The air is thick and humid, carrying with it the faint scent of old parchment and damp wood. The sighing never ceases, a constant rise and fall of breath that matches your own, as if the walls are alive, listening.

The flickering candle sconces lining the corridor provide little comfort. Their flames shudder each time someone exhales, as though the walls themselves are breathing alongside you. And then—just for a moment—you hear a breath that is not your own."

- Enemy: The Hollow Lungs, a spirit bound to the breathing walls.
- Combat Mechanics:

Puzzle Option – The Silent Door

- Trigger: If players investigate the pulsating door at the corridor's end.

- Hints:
  - A successful Perception check (DC 14) reveals that the sighing stops when no one breathes.
  - The Whispering Wood briefly forms the word 'Silence' before shifting again.

Room 9: The Mourning Garden

Where the flowers bloom in sorrow, and the statues weep in silence.

Entering from the Outside

The scent of damp earth and wilted roses fills the air as the space around you shifts. The walls of the corridor fade, replaced by towering wrought-iron gates entwined with vines of pale, lifeless blossoms. Beyond them, a moonlit garden stretches into the darkness, rows of statues standing solemnly among the overgrown pathways.

The moment you step beyond the gate, the temperature drops. The flowers here do not sway, even when a breeze brushes past, and the stone figures watching over them appear unnervingly lifelike—as though they had once been something more.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"A vast, moonlit garden unfurls before you, its beauty dulled by an unnatural stillness. Rows of pale, withered flowers grow in carefully arranged beds, their petals turned toward a sky that is not there. Towering statues of hooded figures stand solemnly at the garden's edge, their faces obscured, their hands clasped in mourning. The air is thick with the scent of earth and faded perfume, though no source can be seen. Then, just for an instant, one of the statues seems to shift—not in movement, but in presence, as though something within it is watching you."

  - Each round, a random statue steps from its pedestal, silently advancing.

Puzzle Option – The Dry Fountain's Secret

- Trigger: If players investigate the fountain's sound of dripping water.
- Solution: The fountain's basin must be filled with something other than water.
- Hints:
  - A successful History check (DC 14) reveals that the garden was once watered with sorrow itself.
  - The Forgotten Widow motions toward her chest, as though remembering something she has lost.

Room 10: The Lantern of the Lost

Where forgotten souls seek their way home.

Entering from the Outside

The hallway twists, and suddenly, you stand before a narrow stone archway draped in tattered, windless banners. Beyond it, a dense, swirling fog cloaks the floor, reflecting the pale glow of countless floating lanterns. The air carries the scent of burning incense, tinged with something unplaceable—a fragrance that reminds you of long-lost memories, of names you should remember but do not.
A single, dark lantern hangs at the archway's entrance, its glass panes blackened, its candle unlit. As you step through, the mist thickens, and the distant sound of bells echoes from somewhere unseen.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"A chamber of endless mist stretches before you, broken only by the faint glow of floating lanterns drifting in slow, aimless patterns. Their light flickers weakly, as if struggling to remain lit. Beneath them, the fog swirls thick, clinging to your legs like grasping fingers. The air hums with the distant toll of unseen bells, their chimes irregular, their source impossible to pinpoint.

- Hints:
  - A successful Insight check (DC 14) reveals that the lantern reacts to names spoken aloud.
  - The Keeper of the Lanterns pauses only when a player speaks a name they cannot remember.

Room 11: The Door That Remembers

Where the past knocks before entering.

Entering from the Outside

As you take your next step, the floor beneath you creaks like an old wooden door swinging open. The air turns thick with the scent of aged parchment and dust, and ahead, an ornate wooden door stands alone in the corridor. It is not attached to any wall, yet it does not fall.

A brass plaque is fixed just above its handle, inscribed with a name—your name. The moment your eyes settle on it, the door trembles slightly, as if it recognizes you. Beyond it, nothing can be seen but darkness.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"The wooden door stands solitary, unanchored by walls, yet refusing to fall. Its rich mahogany surface is etched with intricate swirling patterns that shift when you aren't looking. The brass handle is worn smooth, as though countless hands have turned it before.

The plaque above the handle bears a name—your name. The instant you recognize it, the door quivers. A faint knock echoes from the other side. The air in the room feels heavier, laden with something unseen but present. A whisper slithers through the silence: 'Are you ready to remember?'"

Room 12: The Endless Wake

Where the dead never leave, and the living may never wake.

Entering from the Outside

The flickering sconces dim, the hallway narrowing into an arched doorway draped in heavy black funeral cloth. Beyond, a grand hall stretches into the distance, its wooden floor lined with endless rows of dark oak chairs, all facing a single open casket resting upon a raised dais. The scent of wilted lilies and burning incense fills the air.

As you step forward, the pews are not empty. Silent figures in mourning garb sit rigidly, heads bowed, hands clasped in prayer or grief. None move. None breathe. And yet, the air is thick with the sound of quiet, steady weeping.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"The funeral hall stretches endlessly, lined with countless rows of mourners cloaked in deep black. The scent of lilies and burning wax lingers, oppressive and heavy. The air is unnervingly still, broken only by a soft, distant weeping that seems to shift—always near, yet never close.

At the far end of the hall, the casket lies open upon a dais, its silk-lined interior waiting, as if expecting someone. A tall candle stands at its head, its flame burning with a pale, unnatural blue light. Though the mourners do not move, you can feel their gazes upon you, as though they are waiting for something to begin."

Room 13: The Tavern of Tales

Where stories live, and the ale flows between the lines.

Entering from the Outside

The smell of roasted meat, aged ale, and candle wax fills your senses as the door ahead swings open. The dim glow of lanterns flickers against polished wooden beams, casting long, lazy shadows. A lively hum of voices fills the air, but something is off—no single conversation is distinct, as if the words dissolve before reaching your ears.

*A fireplace crackles in the center of the room, its flames burning in unnatural hues of blue and violet. Tables stand occupied by figures with blurred faces, each absorbed in quiet conversations that cannot be heard. The bartender polishes a glass, his eyes reflecting too many flames.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"The tavern hums with an eerie warmth, neither inviting nor hostile. The scent of spiced ale and pipe smoke lingers in the air, though no one is seen drinking. The wooden beams overhead are carved with names—thousands of them, spanning centuries. The bartender, a tall, gaunt man with polished brass buttons on his vest, lifts his gaze toward you, a flicker of recognition in his hollow eyes.

A lute plays somewhere in the corner, its melody twisting through the air, but no bard can be seen. The conversations around you remain just beyond clarity, as if the stories themselves are deciding whether or not to be told."

As you push it open, warm candlelight spills over you, revealing an opulent banquet hall lined with silk-draped tables, gilded chandeliers, and high-backed velvet chairs.
The scent of roasted meat and spiced wine fills the air, and a lively melody drifts from a self-playing harpsichord in the corner. Guests in fine attire raise their glasses in silent toasts, yet their eyes do not meet yours. The moment you step inside, the door clicks shut behind you.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"A grand banquet stretches before you, a lavish feast laid out across silver trays and crystalline goblets. The scent is intoxicating, the shimmer of candlelight catching on polished gold filigree and mirrored walls. The guests—beautiful, well-dressed figures—hold their drinks aloft, their faces frozen in masks of indulgent pleasure. Yet, none of them move.

Room 15: The Candlelit Vigil

Where the flames remember what the world has forgotten.

Entering from the Outside

A single candle flickers ahead, its weak light the only beacon in the suffocating darkness. The hallway walls shrink inward, narrow and claustrophobic, as the air grows dense with the scent of old wax and burning wicks. At the corridor's end, a vast chamber unfolds, lined with thousands of candles—each with a silent, unmoving figure kneeling before it.

As you step forward, the door closes behind you. The flames do not flicker, even as a chill wind rolls through the chamber. Then, without warning, one candle abruptly snuffs out—and the figure before it vanishes.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"Before you stretches a vast cathedral-like chamber, its ceiling lost in shadow. Thousands of candles line the stone floor, their flames steady and unwavering. Each one is accompanied by a kneeling figure—silent, motionless, their hands clasped in prayer or sorrow.

The moment you take another step, one candle flickers once—then dies. The figure before it vanishes, leaving only the scent of extinguished wax. Somewhere, beyond the light, you sense something watching."

Room 16: The Fractured Observatory

Where the sky watches back, and time bends upon itself.

Entering from the Outside

As you take your next step, the walls around you dissolve into swirling constellations, and the floor beneath your feet becomes a vast, glass-like expanse reflecting a night sky that is not your own. The air hums with arcane energy, distorting your senses as distant echoes of your own footsteps lag behind you.

Suspended above, fragments of shattered brass and glass—remnants of an enormous celestial apparatus—float aimlessly, caught between gravity and the void.

A massive orrery, broken and incomplete, rotates slowly at the center of the room, its metal arms bent, its planets misaligned. A fractured clockwork sun hovers just above it, its light flickering irregularly, as if uncertain whether to shine or fade into nothingness.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"The world around you twists into a cosmic abyss, a shattered observatory frozen between the fabric of reality and something beyond. The sky stretches endlessly in all directions, yet the glass-like floor holds your weight without cracking. Shards of broken mechanisms drift in lazy spirals overhead, reflecting your movements at impossible angles.

The orrery at the chamber's heart creaks as it turns, its celestial bodies shifting in and out of alignment, their motions stuttering like a fractured memory. A distant, whispering wind coils around you, speaking in languages you have never heard yet somehow understand."

Room 17: The Shattered Veil

Where the fabric of reality is threadbare, and the unseen whispers through the cracks.

Entering from the Outside

The air shimmers before you, bending light in impossible ways as if the very walls of the Mansion hesitate to reveal what lies beyond. A doorway—half-there, half-not—flickers into existence, and stepping through it is like pushing through the surface of a still pond. The moment you cross, the world shifts, and everything feels... wrong.

The space before you is vast, yet enclosed; empty, yet crowded. Ghostly impressions of objects flicker in and out of existence, as if caught between two realities. Every breath feels delayed, every movement echoed by an unseen force just a fraction behind you. At the room's center, a massive crack runs through the air itself, jagged and shifting, like glass on the verge of breaking completely.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"As you enter, reality itself seems hesitant to let you pass. The walls flicker between solid and translucent, the floor stretches wider when you aren't looking, and the ceiling disappears into an infinite abyss. Objects—a chair, a table, an ornate mirror—blink in and out of sight, never fully present nor completely gone.

At the heart of the chamber, a vast fracture splits the air, its edges shifting unpredictably. From beyond it, distant whispers call out in languages long forgotten. They are not speaking to you... yet."

- Trigger: If players attempt to touch the rift, disrupt the Veilbound Stranger, or destroy a flickering object.
- Enemy: The Reality-Torn Guardian, a being that exists in multiple states of existence simultaneously.

  - Each attack shifts the Guardian between states, changing its resistances.
  - At the start of each turn, players must roll a d6; on a 1-2, the Guardian rewinds time, undoing the last 6 seconds.

Puzzle Option – Stabilizing the Veil

- Trigger: If players study the fracture and interact with the flickering objects.
- Solution: The rift must be anchored by reassembling the fragmented echoes of the room.
- Hints:
    - A successful Arcana check (DC 16) reveals that objects appear in cycles—placing them where they were before they vanished stabilizes the room.
    - The Broken Reflection gestures subtly toward the correct sequence.

Room 18: The Echoing Library

Where knowledge repeats itself, and the past refuses to be forgotten.

Entering from the Outside

The doorway ahead is no longer wooden—it has become an archway of books, their spines shifting and rearranging as if deciding what knowledge to reveal. As you step through, the air thickens, heavy with the scent of ink and parchment, dust and candle wax. The towering shelves stretch endlessly in all directions, their contents murmuring softly, as though each book is whispering to itself.

As you move deeper, the words begin repeating—not just from the books, but in your own mind. The titles shift when you aren't looking. Your own thoughts feel echoed a moment after you have them, as if something unseen is reading along with you.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"You stand in the middle of a grand library where the shelves twist in endless spirals, reaching into unseen heights. Candles flicker at random intervals, their flames casting moving shadows upon walls lined with tomes older than time.

Yet something is wrong. Words spoken aloud repeat an instant later in a hushed whisper. Footsteps echo not once, but twice, as if another set of feet follow in perfect synchronization.   - Every attack made against it erases one sentence from a random book on the shelves.

Puzzle Option – Completing the Unfinished Passage

- Trigger: If players investigate the Gilded Tome.
- Solution: The missing words must be written in the correct sequence, mirroring the echoes in the room.
- Hints:

Room 19: The Paradox Chamber

Where time folds upon itself, and reality is rewritten with every step.

Entering from the Outside

The doorway ahead leads into an ornate, circular chamber lined with grand arches, each framing an identical version of the room beyond. A soft ticking noise echoes throughout, like an unseen clock counting down to an unknown moment. The moment you step forward, the sensation of déjà vu overtakes you, as if you've already been here before... but something is different.
Shadows stretch in impossible directions, movements feel delayed or duplicated, and reflections appear in places where no mirrors exist. At the heart of the room, a massive hourglass stands upon an intricate brass pedestal, its sand frozen mid-fall.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"You find yourself within a circular chamber, its high vaulted ceiling lined with intricate astrological engravings. Archways open into mirrored versions of this very room, stretching in all directions, yet never leading anywhere new.
The air hums with static, and every sound repeats an instant after you hear it. A towering hourglass stands at the chamber's heart, yet its sand does not move—hanging mid-air as if time itself refuses to pass. - Enemy: The Temporal Warden, a being that exists in multiple states of time simultaneously.

    - A failed attack causes a player to move backward in time, repeating their last action.

Puzzle Option – Restarting the Hourglass

- Trigger: If players study the hourglass and the chamber's time distortions.
- Solution: The sand must be set into motion, but time itself resists their efforts.
- Hints:
    - A successful Arcana check (DC 16) reveals that time moves only when forgotten—players must turn away from the hourglass for it to function.
    - The Lost Figure glitches slightly when near the correct mechanism, revealing where to focus efforts.

Room 20: The Astral Gateway

Where the boundary between dimensions is thin, and the void calls to wandering souls.

Entering from the Outside

The air hums with arcane energy as the door ahead flickers, shifting between solid wood and shimmering starlight. When you step forward, the transition is seamless—one moment you are in the Mansion, the next, you are somewhere else entirely. The walls dissolve into an endless cosmic expanse, and gravity itself feels lighter, as if tethered only loosely to this plane.

Massive stone pillars, carved with celestial symbols, drift weightlessly, orbiting a swirling vortex at the chamber's center. The void beyond is infinite, stars flickering and vanishing in patterns that make no earthly sense. And yet... something moves out there. Watching.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"The Mansion is gone. You stand in a vast, weightless expanse where the sky stretches infinitely in all directions. There is no ground, yet you do not fall. Suspended stone platforms shift gently beneath unseen forces, their surfaces etched with arcane sigils that pulse with unknown intent.

A swirling rift floats at the chamber's heart, its edges unstable, its center impossibly dark. It is not merely absence—it is hunger, waiting. Beyond, within the infinite void, something watches. It does not speak. It does not move. But it is aware."

Room Description

Room 21: The Labyrinth of Shifting Truths

Where perception is fluid, and reality molds itself to belief.

Entering from the Outside

The doorway shimmers as if seen through heat haze, warping slightly before stabilizing. When you step forward, the walls around you ripple like liquid glass, reforming into an endless corridor lined with mirrored surfaces. The sensation of déjà vu strikes immediately—have you been here before?

The twisting paths seem familiar, yet different. As you move, reflections shift subtly, showing possibilities rather than reality. Some mirrors show past events, others glimpses of futures yet to come. The corridor bends in unnatural angles, and the further you go, the more uncertain the space becomes.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"The corridor ahead is endless, its mirrored walls stretching into infinity. Every step alters something—an object in your reflection moves before you do, a torch flickers in time with your breath. The further you walk, the more the space twists. Some mirrors do not show your reflection at all. Others display scenes that have not happened—yet. At irregular intervals, faint whispers echo from deeper within the labyrinth, as if the walls themselves conspire to deceive you."

Entering from the Outside

The threshold ahead shimmers with a strange distortion, as though reality itself is stretched too thin. Stepping through, you find yourself in an enormous circular chamber. Around you, towering doors of every shape and size fill the walls from floor to ceiling. Some doors are grand and gilded, others simple wooden frames. A few are ajar, revealing glimpses of unknown landscapes beyond.

The moment you enter, a low hum fills the air, and several doors creak open slightly as if awaiting a choice. A feeling of being watched lingers, though no presence is visible. Each door offers passage, but none reveal their true destination.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"You stand in an enormous circular chamber where countless doors line the walls, stretching impossibly high. Each one is unique—some small and worn, others massive and carved with intricate symbols. A few doors are slightly open, revealing only shifting darkness beyond.

There is no ceiling, only a vast void above, dotted with floating keys and doorframes suspended in midair. As you step forward, a few doors creak open ever so slightly, as if inviting you in. A single phrase whispers through the chamber, though the voice remains unseen:

Room 23: The Alchemist's Paradox

Where transformation is both a gift and a curse.

Entering from the Outside

The wooden door ahead is unremarkable—until it opens of its own accord. The air shifts, heavy with the scent of bubbling potions and burning incense. Stepping inside, you find yourself in a grand alchemical chamber, its walls lined with shelves filled with swirling vials, shifting powders, and incomprehensible formulae scrawled across aged parchment. At the center, a massive glass cauldron rests on a metal dais, its contents glowing with an unnatural light.

A golden liquid swirls within the cauldron, flickering between colors and states of matter. The moment your reflection appears in the glass, something changes—your skin prickles, your breath catches, and for the briefest moment, you see another version of yourself staring back, eyes filled with knowing.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"The chamber is warm, filled with the crackling of bubbling mixtures and the scent of rare herbs. Towering bookshelves stretch toward the high ceiling, crammed with dusty tomes and alchemical instruments. Glass flasks of shifting liquid rest in mid-air, suspended by unseen forces.

*At the heart of the room, a massive cauldron hums with energy, filled with a golden liquid that refuses to settle. Its surface ripples unnaturally, reflecting not only the present but fractured glimpses of what could be. Room 24: The Celestial Orrery

Where the stars move to unseen hands, and fate is rewritten in the heavens.

Entering from the Outside

The doorway ahead is not wood or stone—it is a swirling gap of pure darkness, filled with glimmers of distant stars. Crossing the threshold feels like stepping through the fabric of reality itself. The air is cool, thin, and strangely weightless.

Above, a massive orrery of golden spheres and rotating rings dominates the vast domed chamber, shifting in perfect celestial harmony. Stars glow along the walls, aligning and misaligning with every rotation. The ground beneath your feet is carved with constellations that shimmer faintly under your steps. There is no sound—except for the slow, rhythmic clicking of planetary gears shifting above you.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"You find yourself standing beneath a vast mechanical sky. Gigantic golden spheres, linked by ethereal rings, rotate overhead in synchronized patterns, casting long, shifting shadows upon the chamber floor. The walls shimmer like the night sky, filled with stars that flicker and realign themselves as the orrery moves.

A single pedestal stands at the room's center, upon which a crystalline sphere rests, pulsating with the glow of countless tiny constellations. The air is hushed, the silence only broken by the steady ticking of unseen mechanisms. Something in this chamber feels ancient, as if fate itself has passed through here countless times before."

Room 25: The Crimson Reflection

The mirror does not show who you are, but what you hunger for.

Entering from the Outside

A shift in perspective catches your eye—where once there was only a wall, now stands a grand, arched doorway framed in obsidian. A faint glow pulses within, illuminating a chamber bathed in a deep red hue. As you step forward, the scent of aged parchment and spiced wine fills the air, tinged with something metallic... something like blood.

Before you, a towering mirror stands against the far wall. Its surface is flawless yet strangely alive, shifting as though the reflection it holds is not your own but something watching from the other side. The moment you gaze into it, your vision distorts—the world tilts, and the reflection does not move as you do.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"The chamber is lined with towering bookcases, their shelves filled with tomes bound in deep crimson leather. A grand mirror, nearly spanning the entire far wall, hums with unseen energy. Its surface ripples as though liquid, yet remains perfectly reflective.

Room 26: The Labyrinth of Living Ink

Where stories write themselves, and the ink watches you back.

Entering from the Outside

The door ahead is not made of wood or stone—it is parchment, covered in shifting lines of ink that move and reform as you approach. As you step through, the words scatter like startled insects, and the room beyond unfolds around you like the turning pages of a book. You now stand in a vast study, filled with towering bookshelves. Yet, the books do not remain still. Sentences slip across their pages, reshaping their own narratives, while ink drips from open tomes, pooling into shifting shapes on the floor. The air smells of aged parchment and fresh ink, yet beneath it all, there is the unmistakable sensation of being read as much as you are reading.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"You find yourself in an immense study, where bookshelves stretch into the hazy distance, shifting their positions when you aren't looking. The tomes within them murmur softly, their pages flicking open as words rearrange themselves. Ink drips from the shelves, gathering into shimmering pools on the marble floor before rising into twisting, half-formed figures.

At the center of the room, an ornate writing desk sits before an enormous tome, open to a blank page. A quill levitates above it, waiting, expectant. The moment you step forward, words begin to scrawl across the page:

Room 27: The Mirror Hall

Where your reflections move before you do.

Entering from the Outside

The flickering lantern light catches your reflection in the tavern mirror—except, for a split second, your reflection does not match your movements. The moment passes, and everything seems normal... until you step forward, and the wooden floor beneath you turns to smooth glass. The air shifts, colder, and the scent of old dust replaces the warmth of ale and firewood. You blink, and the tavern is gone.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"As you take another step, the ground vanishes beneath you—not into darkness, but into infinite reflections. Every surface surrounding you is glass, stretching outward, repeating your movements over and over in a dizzying illusion of endless corridors. Yet something is wrong... Some of the reflections lag behind, turning their heads slower than you do, while others move just a little too fast.

The floor beneath you is smooth, a perfect black mirror reflecting the ceiling—a ceiling that does not exist. Instead, your own image stares back at you from below, distorted by thin cracks spidering outward from where your foot touches.

A faint hum fills the air, a whispering resonance that brushes against your ears like forgotten voices. Shadows flicker at the edges of the mirrors, darting just out of sight when you try to focus on them.

Somewhere, beyond the countless reflections, a door creaks open. But there are no doors."

How Players Obtain These Items

- Shard of Echoing Glass: Found within the shattered portal mirror after resolving the room's challenge.
- The Silver Mask: Hanging on a hook from one of the mirrors that doesn't show a reflection.

Room 28: The Chamber of Shifting Runes

Where symbols rewrite themselves, and knowledge is both a weapon and a trap.

Entering from the Outside

The air crackles with latent magic as you step through the doorway. Instead of solid walls, shifting runes float in the air, forming intricate patterns before dissolving into new configurations. The floor pulses beneath your feet, each step momentarily illuminating unknown glyphs. The room itself is alive, rewriting its own existence with every moment.

DM Read-Aloud Description

The air grows thick with whispers, repeating your own thoughts back to you in a distorted echo. Looking over the railing, you see yourself far below... or perhaps above? The staircase winds infinitely in all directions, with no discernible end in sight.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"The chamber you enter is an impossible space—a vast, spiraling staircase twisting in all directions. Steps stretch out above, below, and sideways, leading into paths that seem to fold upon themselves. Doors hang suspended in midair, opening to nowhere. The walls are lined with faded portraits, each shifting slightly when not observed directly.

"This chamber is vast yet enclosed, lined with obsidian walls that shimmer as though absorbing sound. A heavy silence presses against you, broken only by the eerie repetition of your own words, delayed and distorted. Shadows stretch unnaturally, moving in time with the echoes, even when there is no light source to cast them.

Room 37: The Fractured Hourglass

Where time bends, memories repeat, and moments fracture beyond repair.

Entering from the Outside

A gust of wind rushes past you, though no source can be seen. The walls ahead shimmer like rippling water, and as you step forward, you hear a faint ticking—steady at first, then erratic. Your footsteps land heavier, as if the floor is dragging you into the past.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"You find yourself inside a circular chamber dominated by an enormous, shattered hourglass floating above the center. Time-sanded fragments hover midair, suspended in place, refusing to fall. The hourglass drips golden grains of sand, yet instead of collecting at the base, they scatter upward into the void.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"You find yourself in a chamber where the walls, floor, and ceiling are covered in countless glowing symbols, moving like ink bleeding through parchment. Lines of text form and vanish at random, written in a language both familiar and unknown.
In the center of the room, a tall obsidian pillar rises, engraved with a singular riddle, flickering as if it is incomplete. A shimmer passes over your skin as you enter, like stepping through water without getting wet. The air is thick, like glass pressing against your body, and a faint ringing hums at the edge of your hearing. Then you see it—the room you stand in, but flipped, mirrored in impossible ways. Your reflection does not match your movements. Instead, it watches... and waits.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"The room stretches before you, identical in every way—yet not. The floor beneath your feet ripples like liquid glass, yet remains solid. The walls are smooth, polished, reflecting not only the space but your every movement. And yet...
Your reflection does not follow.
Instead of mirroring your actions, it lingers a second too long, tilting its head at an unnatural angle, studying you. As you move forward, the reflections around you act differently—some mimicking your past movements, others predicting actions you haven't taken yet. The doorway behind you is gone, replaced with another reflection."

Entering from the Outside

The doorway behind you crumbles into floating shards of stone the moment you step forward. The floor beneath your feet tilts slightly before steadying itself, as if struggling to maintain balance. Looking ahead, the room is a maze—but the walls are not solid. Sections flicker, shifting between tangible stone and intangible illusions. The maze does not stay the same for long.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"You find yourself in a massive, open labyrinth where walls shift unpredictably between stone and illusion. Some paths stretch infinitely, while others fold in on themselves, leading back to where you started. The floor tilts unnaturally, moving beneath your feet as if trying to decide which way gravity should flow.
Above, shattered fragments of the ceiling hover in midair, frozen in time, while others drift lazily, reshaping the structure of the maze at irregular intervals. Dim, flickering torchlight provides uncertain guidance, but the real danger is the space itself—it does not seem entirely bound by the rules of reality.

Room 44: The Marionette's Masquerade

Where every step forward might lead you back, and the past is never truly gone.

Entering from the Outside

*The door opens into a simple stone hallway, but as you step through, the air shifts strangely. When you glance behind, the door you > The door before you is carved with elaborate marionettes, their wooden faces locked in expressions of silent revelry. But something is wrong—each dancer moves with stiff, unnatural precision, their limbs bending at the wrong angles.

The music is hollow, echoing as though played by unseen hands. A grand chandelier sways gently above, its flickering light casting long, exaggerated shadows. Then, as the last player steps inside, the door clicks shut behind them, and the dancers all turn in unison to face the newcomers.

DM Read-Aloud Description

*"The ballroom is magnificent, yet unnerving. Red and gold curtains drape from towering pillars, and great marble statues line the walls, their hands outstretched as if frozen mid-performance. The dancers—once a blur of motion—stand still now, their wooden eyes fixated on you. Their finely embroidered garments ripple as though stirred by invisible hands. A violin's wail fills the air, though no musician can be seen. Then, one of the marionettes steps forward, its mouth opening with a sickening creak as it speaks.*

Come, honored guests. The dance has just begun.'"

Room 45: The Impossible Bridge

Step forward and watch the path change beneath your feet.

Entering from the Outside

You take a step, and suddenly the floor beneath you is gone—replaced by an endless abyss. A thin, silver bridge stretches before you, suspended over the void with no visible supports. The moment your foot lands on it, the bridge shifts, extending in a different direction, as if deciding where to lead you.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"A vast, star-filled void stretches endlessly below and above you. A single silver bridge, impossibly thin, extends across the abyss. There are no railings, no handholds—just the sheer drop into nothingness.
The bridge appears sturdy, but as you step forward, the path ripples, shifting and reconfiguring itself with each movement. Sometimes it leads ahead, other times it bends at sharp angles, creating dead ends before reforming elsewhere.

Entering from the Outside

You step forward, and the ceiling above vanishes, revealing an endless cosmic expanse. The floor beneath your feet shifts into a mosaic of shattered starlight, each fragment glowing faintly. In the distance, celestial bodies float, suspended midair, some drifting closer while others fade into the void. The air hums with ancient energy, and you sense that movement itself has meaning here.

Towering conveyor belts weave like highways, each one carrying parts of intricate, unfinished machines. Gigantic metal arms whir to life, assembling strange contraptions with mindless precision. Steam hisses from unseen vents, and the clanging of hammers echoes through the air. Yet, for all the noise, not a single worker can be seen... only the machines, tirelessly building something beyond understanding.

Room 63: The Gears of Fate

Every cog has a role. Will you be one of them?

Entering from the Outside

You step forward, and the world shifts. The air becomes heavy with the scent of oil and metal, and the floor beneath your feet moves—turning, grinding, a massive gear shifting with your weight. Around you, hundreds of gears, levers, and intricate mechanisms tower into the shadows above, shifting and rotating with an unnatural rhythm. The walls are made of interlocking brass cogs, each turning in perfect unison, except for one—one that hesitates, clicking unnaturally as if waiting for something... or someone.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"The chamber is alive with motion. Massive gears, some the size of carriages, rotate methodically, their golden surfaces polished to a mirror shine. Chains dangle from unseen heights, swaying gently with each shift of the room's mechanics. The ceiling is lost in a maze of interwoven cogs, endlessly turning in a rhythmic dance.
A massive, circular platform dominates the room, suspended above a yawning void of darkness. Across its surface, smaller gears rotate beneath your feet, adjusting slightly with every step. In the center of the chamber, an ancient mechanical console stands untouched, its levers and dials covered in thin layers of dust—as if no one has touched it in centuries.
Then, with a deafening clang, the entire room shudders. A deep voice, resonating like grinding stone, echoes from nowhere: 'One must turn the wheel, or the wheel will turn you."

Room 64: The Clockwork Graveyard

Where forgotten gears turn in defiance of time.

Entering from the Outside

The air shifts as you step forward, thick with the scent of rust and oil. What was once solid ground is now uneven terrain, a vast junkyard of broken machines and discarded clockwork contraptions stretching into the distance. Towering heaps of twisted metal loom around you, their edges sharp and glinting under the dim, artificial light that flickers above. Everywhere, there is movement—small gears still turning despite their mechanisms being long shattered, metallic limbs twitching as though yearning for purpose. Then, from within the debris, something stirs—a low, rhythmic clanking, steady and deliberate, like the ticking of a vast unseen clock.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"Piles of rusted metal, shattered cogs, and broken automaton limbs litter the junkyard, forming precarious mountains of discarded innovation. The distant glow of failing gas lamps casts long, shifting shadows that stretch unnaturally across the debris. Somewhere deep within the graveyard of machinery, a rhythmic ticking echoes—a heartbeat of something that should no longer function. Scraps of old gears roll aimlessly, nudged by unseen forces. The scent of heated metal lingers, and each step echoes with an unnatural crispness, as though sound itself is being carefully measured. The passage behind you is gone—replaced by an endless mechanical maze that rearranges itself with every movement.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"The walls are smooth, polished brass, their reflective surfaces glinting under unseen light. Massive cogs and hidden gears shift seamlessly, altering the passageways in an ever-changing configuration. The floor beneath you is tiled with metallic plates, some etched with cryptic symbols, others with grooves that suggest movement yet to come.

The machines remember, even if the masters are gone.

Entering from the Outside

You step through the doorway and onto cold metal. The clank of your boots echoes unnaturally, swallowed by the vastness of the room. Gears creak in the distance, and for a moment, the chamber is silent. Then, a flickering light bursts to life overhead, revealing towering metal figures locked in endless, frozen combat. The scent of scorched metal lingers in the air, and somewhere, a low mechanical growl begins to build.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"Before you lies a vast arena, its walls lined with towering statues of long-forgotten automatons—rusted, shattered, and silent. The arena floor is covered in battle scars, deep gouges where titanic machines once clashed. The air crackles with residual energy, the remnants of something ancient and powerful.

At the far end of the chamber stands a colossal automaton, nearly twenty feet tall. Its armor is pitted and cracked, yet its glowing core flickers weakly—still alive. The whispers in the air grow louder as you approach, many voices speaking at once, some urgent, some deceitful. At the chamber's center, a towering obsidian orrery—a mechanical representation of a forgotten cosmos—rotates in slow silence. Gears made of starmetal and enchanted glass interlock with impossible intricacy, clicking and shifting without sound.

To one side, an enormous tome bound in deep indigo leather floats above a pedestal, its pages turning of their own accord. A singular doorway flickers in and out of sight along the far wall, shifting positions as if trying to hide from view.

As you step forward, the floor beneath you shifts—once sturdy wood warps into smooth obsidian. The doorway behind you is gone, replaced by towering black marble columns stretching into darkness. Hundreds of parchment scrolls hang from invisible threads, suspended in the air. They sway as though touched by an unseen breeze, though the air remains still. A hollow echo fills the room, like a thousand whispered promises waiting to be remembered.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"You find yourself in a massive, cathedral-like chamber, its ceiling lost to the void above. Rows of empty wooden chairs line the walls, their backs turned inward, as though refusing to witness what happens here.
Suspended in the air, parchment scrolls of varying ages drift like phantoms, their faded ink pulsing faintly in the dim light. Some scrolls curl and snap shut as if sensing your presence, while others unravel on their own, whispering forgotten oaths in languages you don't recognize.
At the far end of the hall, an enormous stone altar stands between two monolithic statues of featureless robed figures. Their hands are outstretched, palms upward, as though waiting for something.

You step forward, and the corridor behind you is gone —replaced by a cozy, dimly lit tavern*. A massive hearth crackles at the far end, its flickering flames* casting shifting, unnatural shadows across the walls. The bar is well-stocked, the wooden beams sturdy, and the patrons... a little too still.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"You stand in what appears to be a welcoming tavern, its oaken tables polished and set with untouched mugs of ale. The air is thick with pipe smoke, curling toward the high wooden rafters. An old barkeep stands behind the counter, his face lined with wisdom and weariness. He nods in acknowledgment but does not speak.
The walls are lined with paintings, all depicting different versions of this very room, each with subtle, eerie changes—fewer patrons, dimmer light, an extra doorway that doesn't exist here.
The patrons do not speak, nor do they blink. Their smiles seem fixed in place, their mugs frozen mid-toast. The only movement comes from the shadows cast by the great hearth, which flicker and shift unnaturally, even when the flames are still."

The road was empty a moment ago. Now, an inviting inn stands before you, its wooden sign swinging lazily in the still air. The name carved into the wood shifts between blinks—one moment, it reads "The Last Hearth", the next, "The Wandering Rest". Lantern light glows warmly from the windows, and the sound of distant laughter beckons you inside. The moment you cross the threshold, the door behind you clicks shut—and when you turn, the entrance is gone, replaced by a wall of shifting portraits.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"The tavern is warm and inviting, the scent of fresh bread and spiced cider thick in the air. The polished wooden tables are set for a feast, though no one seems to be eating. The patrons are many and varied, each wearing clothing from vastly different time periods—some in noble finery, others in battle-scarred armor, and a few in styles you've never seen before. They converse as though unaware of each other, speaking in mismatched tongues, toasting to victories from centuries apart.

The bar stretches far into the distance, seemingly longer than the room should allow. The bartender is different every time you glance at them—one moment a kindly old man, the next a silent woman in a hood, then a grinning skeleton.

The moment you cross the threshold, warmth floods your senses—laughter, clinking goblets, and the rhythmic hum of lively music. A grand banquet stretches before you, a long wooden table overflowing with exotic delicacies. Yet something feels... wrong. The guests, dressed in noble finery, smile too widely. Their eyes glint with something unnatural, and none of them cast shadows.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"The long dining table is adorned with golden candelabras and plates piled high with food, untouched yet steaming fresh. Goblets brim with deep red wine, and the air is thick with the scent of roasted meats, honeyed fruits, and strange spices.
The nobles seated at the table turn in eerie unison to regard you, their expressions frozen in unnervingly wide smiles. Their hands hover over their plates, but none of them eat.

Room 96: The Whispering Hearth

Where the fire never dies, and the stories never end.

Entering from the Outside

The flickering glow of a hearth spills out from beneath the wooden door ahead, carrying the scent of aged oak, spiced cider, and something vaguely nostalgic. As you push the door open, warmth engulfs you—not just the heat of the fire, but a deep, comforting presence that makes you feel like you've been here before. The wooden beams creak softly, and the low murmur of voices fills the space. But there is something strange... The flames in the hearth shift as if they are whispering secrets, and the patrons never quite look away from it.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"The inn is small and cozy, a rustic retreat from the strange halls beyond. A massive stone hearth dominates the room, its flames dancing in shades of blue and gold. Around it, patrons sit with quiet smiles, listening, mesmerized.

Every now and then, a voice emerges from the fire, speaking softly—words half-heard, stories half-told. The flames do not crackle; they whisper.

A lone figure, wrapped in a tattered cloak, sits closest to the hearth. Their face is shadowed, their fingers idly tracing patterns in the wood of the table. They beckon you closer and, without looking up, murmur, 'The fire remembers. It sees all who pass through these halls.'"

The bartender, a stout man with a welcoming grin, waves you over. 'Welcome, travelers! First round's on the house!'
Yet, as you glance around, something feels wrong. The same song plays over and over. The same patrons lift their drinks in the same motion. The same dice tumble across the table, showing the same roll. As if this moment has repeated a thousand times... and will repeat a thousand more."

A gust of dry wind carries the scent of parchment and old stone as you step forward. Before you looms a ruined basilica, its towering spires broken and crumbling against a sky frozen in twilight. The great wooden doors, weathered and cracked, groan open at the lightest touch, revealing the grand, dust-laden interior beyond. You cross the threshold, a hush falls over the world—no wind, no whispers, only silence... except for the faintest echo of a sermon that ended centuries ago.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"Before you stretches a cathedral of unimaginable scale, its vast nave lined with towering stone columns, their once-pristine carvings now eroded by time. Shafts of pale light pour through shattered stained-glass windows, their fractured colors pooling across the cracked marble floor. The pulpit stands tall at the far end, a robed figure kneeling before it—untouched by decay, as if frozen in prayer.

The air is thick with dust, yet footsteps do not disturb it. Rows of wooden pews remain perfectly aligned, undisturbed by the centuries. A vast, open ruin spreads before you—a crumbling amphitheater, half-submerged in black, still water. Ornate statues stand half-drowned, their faces worn smooth by time. From the far side of the flooded forum, a ghostly murmur rises—whispers of arguments long settled, yet still unresolved.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"The grand steps of a sunken amphitheater descend into dark, unmoving water. Stone columns rise from the flood, their carved reliefs faded into obscurity. Rows of marble seating curve in a semi-circle, long abandoned yet eerily untouched by nature. At the very center, a broken lectern stands on a floating platform, its inscription long since erased.

A faint mist hovers over the water, curling around the statues and vanishing when disturbed. The surface remains eerily still, reflecting the shattered sky above with perfect clarity. Entering from the Outside

As you brush your fingers against an ancient tome in a dusty library, the world around you seems to freeze. The floor crumbles beneath your feet, revealing an endless void lined with towering bookshelves. A rush of air pulls you forward, and in a blink, you find yourself standing before a massive, rune-sealed door of obsidian and gold. The weight of untold knowledge presses upon your mind, beckoning yet warning in equal measure.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"A dim, golden glow filters through the dust-filled air, illuminating towering bookshelves stretching endlessly upward. The scent of old parchment and candlewax lingers, mixing with something... unnatural, like static in the air.

Before you stands a massive vault-like door, wrought from obsidian and inlaid with shifting arcane runes. The symbols pulse, flickering between forgotten languages and lost incantations. The bookshelves surrounding the chamber are bound shut with chains of silver, whispering faintly as if resisting unseen hands.

DM Read-Aloud Description

*"You step into a chamber bathed in eternal twilight, the air thick with the scent of ancient parchment and candle wax. Towering stone figures kneel in silent reverence, their hands clasped in prayer or supplication, their forms worn smooth by time. Between them, spectral flames hover, casting wavering light upon the polished obsidian floor. At the far end, an enormous archway looms, its door locked by unseen force. As the party steps forward, the sensation of solid ground shifts beneath them. The walls ripple like the surface of a disturbed pond, revealing a vast domed chamber lined with rotating planetary mechanisms. Gears the size of carriages click into place overhead, while constellations shimmer in the blackness beyond. There is no visible door behind them—only the infinite cosmos above and the vast clockwork below.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"You stand within a cathedral of stars. Towering brass pillars extend endlessly into a sky filled with shifting celestial bodies. A massive orrery—a rotating model of the universe—dominates the chamber, its rings and spheres aligning and shifting in a hypnotic rhythm. The floor beneath you pulses faintly with golden light, tracing intricate astrological symbols that flicker with an unseen energy.

The air crackles with latent power, and from the depths of the chamber, a distant, rhythmic ticking echoes like a heartbeat. Suspended above a central dais, a floating sphere of light pulsates in time with the orrery, its glow shifting with each realignment of the celestial machinery. Here, the Mansion's creator left their mark, but the echoes of their presence remain... watching.

Entering from the Outside

A heavy wooden door, unlike any other in the Mansion, appears before the party. Ornate carvings of impossible geometries shift subtly when viewed at different angles. As the door creaks open, the scent of aged parchment and candle wax fills the air. The space beyond seems both ancient and newly built, as if it exists outside of time itself.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"You step into a vast study, unlike any other in the Mansion. The walls are lined with bookshelves filled with tomes bound in silver and iron, each one labeled with names you almost—but don't quite—recognize. In the center of the room stands an ornate desk, its surface covered in intricate blueprints, schematics, and notes in a script that shifts before your eyes. Above, a domed ceiling is painted with constellations, some familiar, others completely alien. An enormous armillary sphere floats in the center of the ceiling, its rings spinning at irregular intervals, shifting as though responding to an unseen force. Room 109: The Chamber of Forgotten Echoes

Where whispers of the past weave the fate of the present.

Entering from the Outside

A gust of wind howls through the corridor behind you as the door creaks open before you. The walls seem to breathe, shifting with the murmurs of voices that aren't your own. The stone underfoot hums as if resonating with unseen energy, and the air is thick with the scent of parchment, dust, and something faintly metallic.

DM Read-Aloud Description

"This chamber is vast and circular, its walls lined with shifting murals that depict fragmented moments in time. Faces appear and vanish, whispers overlapping in an indecipherable symphony. The ceiling stretches impossibly high, vanishing into darkness where faint glimmers of golden script swirl and disappear.
At the center of the room, an immense stone dais hums with a low, rhythmic pulse. Around it, shattered hourglasses float, their sands suspended in time. As you take a step forward, the whispers converge into a single, urgent word: 'Remember.'"

Room Description

DM Guidance:

Puzzle Option – Restoring the Past

- Trigger: Interacting with the Echo Nexus or hourglasses.
- Solution: The adventurers must speak key words whispered by the spirits in the correct order.

- Description: A single whispered name—the true name of the Architect.
- Effect: Speaking this name in Room 110 awakens a powerful truth about the Mansion's origins.

DM Guidance:

"Room 109 is a place of endings and unseen choices. The walls seem to shift, reflecting moments that may or may not have happened. The portal is not just a doorway—it is a reckoning. The players must confront something lost, forgotten, or rewritten. Here, truth is the key to escape."

The Portal Out

The only exit appears once the adventurers speak a final truth aloud—either something about themselves or a revelation from the murals.

Activating the Portal

- Option 1: One character must willingly offer a memory to the Nexus. The door shimmers into existence, but the memory is lost permanently.
- Option 2: Placing the Whispering Hourglass at the room's center rewinds the chamber's state, causing the original doorway to reappear.
- Option 3: A successful Arcana Check (DC 18) can manipulate the shifting walls to manifest a passageway—but an unseen cost may be exacted.

Portal Appearance

- When activated, the portal shimmers like liquid gold, reflecting past versions of the adventurers.
- Some reflections do not match, hinting at unseen timelines.

Room 110: The Architect's Final Testament

Where the Mansion's deepest secret is whispered in silence

Entering from the Outside

As you blink, the walls around you shift. The path you followed is gone, and the wooden door you just passed through has been replaced by an iron archway carved with countless, twisting runes. A golden key, untouched by time, rests in an indentation in the wall. The air hums with an almost sentient awareness. You have arrived where the Architect's presence is strongest..

DM Read-Aloud Description

"You stand within a grand chamber that stretches beyond sight. Towering, gilded pillars spiral upward into an unseen void, their surfaces shifting between ancient designs and forgotten constellations. The marble floor beneath your feet pulses faintly, reacting to your presence.
Suspended in the air above, a vast, fractured mirror reflects not just the room, but glimpses of what could have been*—a thousand alternate versions of the Mansion, each subtly different.*
A massive stone throne, cracked with age, sits at the center of the chamber. Upon it rests a spectral figure*, neither fully formed nor entirely gone, draped in robes woven from the fabric of shadows and memory. It does not speak—yet a voice echoes in your minds: 'You are seen.' The Architect's final fragment lingers here, waiting for those worthy of understanding the Mansion's truth."*

DM Guidance: Running the Room

Lore Revelation – Unraveling the Architect's Secret

- The Architect's Echo does not answer directly. Instead, it shows glimpses of past failures—of those who entered and never left.

Puzzle Option – Deciphering the Floating Runes

- Players must succeed on an Intelligence (Arcana) check (DC 18) to decipher the runes.

- If failed, the runes rearrange, revealing a new passage they did not intend to open.

Combat Option – The Architect's Guardians

- If players disturb the throne or pull the Key of Reclamation, the room trembles as the Architect's final guardians awaken.
- Two Celestial Wardens descend from the air, their forms shifting between light and shadow.

Celestial Wardens (AC 18 | HP 90 | Radiant Strike: 2d10+4 damage)

- Curse: Once used, it vanishes—only reappearing when most needed, or least expected.

How the Players Obtain These Items

- The Tome of Unwritten Paths: Gifted by the Architect's Echo if they prove themselves.
- The Key of Reclamation: Pulled from the wall—but doing so permanently changes the Mansion.

The Portal Out

The massive doorway of light pulses—but where it leads, none can say.

Portal Activation

- If the Key of Reclamation is used, the doorway opens to a place beyond the Mansion.
- If the Architect's Echo is questioned, it offers no clear answer—only the promise of more questions.

Does the Mansion end here, or does it only begin?
