Welcome & Introduction

Welcome, friend. I am so glad you have stepped into this space.

The Problem: As a Christian woman in academia, you have a deep sense of calling. Yet, it can be a challenge to translate your prayers into a purposeful, productive plan. Deadlines, research, and the weight of responsibilities can easily consume your time, leaving you feeling stretched thin and out of alignment. You're tired of striving and are ready for a new way to work and live.

The Solution: This workbook is your practical companion on the journey from prayer to plan. It is a proven, repeatable framework designed to bridge the gap between your spiritual insights and your daily to-do list. Through a series of clear, actionable exercises, you will learn to replace the burnout of a reactive schedule with the peace of a proactive, purpose-driven rhythm.

The Outcome: By the end of this journey, you will have a practical system to:

- Turn prayer into a plan: Link your prayer life and the sense of purposeful direction you receive from God to create a tangible, actionable schedule.
- Reclaim your time: Strategically manage your energy to focus on what matters most.
- Live with peace: Build sustainable rhythms that honour both your calling and your capacity.

My prayer for you as you work through these pages is that you will find clarity on your next steps and peace as you walk forward with purpose.

With love and expectation,

Esley

Creating Space for God's Voice

“Be still, and know that I am God.”— Psalm 46:10 (ESV)

Introduction

Every meaningful journey begins with a starting point. Before we can act, we must first listen. This section guides you in the spiritual discipline of stillness, creating a sacred space to quiet the demands of life and open your heart to God's voice. This is the foundational step that ensures our plans are rooted in His will, not our own striving.

Teaching

The constant noise of modern life—from notifications to academic pressures—can make it difficult to discern God's direction. We are so used to "doing" that we have forgotten how to "be." Yet, Jesus Himself modelled the necessity of withdrawing from the crowds to be alone with His Father (Luke 5:16, NIV: “But Jesus often withdrew to lonely places and prayed”).

This discipline of stillness is not passive; it is an active act of faith that says, "My schedule and my to-do list will not dictate my life; Your voice will." As Jesus reminds us, "My sheep listen to my voice; I know them, and they follow me" (John 10:27, ESV).

Prompt

Take a moment to reflect. What does stillness currently look like in your life? What voices—internal and external—compete for your attention and hinder your ability to hear God's voice clearly?

Exercise: The Listening Prayer Journal

To help you get started with this practice, there are some simple, practical guidelines on the following page to help you create space to hear from God. This is an invitation to listen, not to strive.

Block out time in your schedule: Set aside time in your daily schedule that is dedicated to prayer, Bible reading, and journalling. The practice of spending focused time with God in intimate, two-way conversation needs to be prioritised as the foundation for all other activities in your life.

Set the Atmosphere: Find a quiet, distraction-free space where you can be alone with God. Silence your phone, close your computer, and let your body and mind settle.

Come with an Open Heart: Begin by inviting the Holy Spirit to speak. You might pray something simple like, "Holy Spirit, what do You want to say to me today?" or "Speak Lord, for Your servant is listening" (based on 1 Samuel 3:10).

Engage All Your Senses: God speaks in many ways. You might hear a still, small voice (1 Kings 19:12), receive a picture or image in your mind's eye, or feel a gentle nudge in your heart. Don't limit how He can communicate.

Write It Down: Use a dedicated journal or notebook to record any thoughts, impressions, or images that come to mind. Don't censor or analyse what you hear; simply write. This isn't about getting it "right," it's about creating a tangible record of your conversation with God.

Test and Discern: After your time of listening, you can prayerfully reflect on what you have written. Does it align with Scripture? Does it bring you peace? Does it sound like the character of God? This step helps you discern what is from the Spirit versus your own thoughts.

Act in Small Obedience: A word from God often comes with an invitation. It might be an invitation to rest, to forgive, or to take a single step forward in a project. As you walk in small acts of obedience, you cultivate your ability to hear and respond to His voice with confidence.

Now that you've practised capturing your thoughts and impressions, it's time to distil them. Your journal is a place for the raw, unfiltered conversation, but the table below is a tool for clarity. It helps you summarise the key insights and identify the most important questions or nudges that came through. This is how we move from the stillness of listening to the clarity needed for planning.

Date	Insights from God (thoughts, images, nudges)	Questions to Ponder
Example: 20 Feb	Example: I had an image of me juggling too many balls at once, and then the word "Focus" came to mind.	Example: What am I currently juggling that I can drop? What is the one thing I need to focus on this week?

Conclusion

Listening is the genesis of every purposeful plan. As you consistently practise distilling your spiritual insights into tangible thoughts and actions, you will experience how your daily life becomes more aligned with your God-given calling. In the next section, we will turn those insights into a clear sense of direction for the season you are in.

Discernment and Direction

“Trust in the LORD with all your heart, and do not lean on your own understanding. In all your ways acknowledge him, and he will make straight your paths.” — Proverbs 3:5-6 (ESV)

Introduction

Once you have created space to listen, the next step is to begin the work of discernment. This is a practice of prayerfully testing what you have heard, looking for recurring themes and nudges from the Holy Spirit. This section will help you move from broader insights and impressions to a clear sense of direction for this season of your life.

Teaching

God rarely gives us a complete blueprint for our entire lives. Instead, He often reveals His will in small, consistent nudges—a persistent desire to start a new project, a passion for a particular social issue, or a recurring burden to mentor others. These threads are part of your God-given calling. Our job is to prayerfully observe our lives and see where God is already at work. This is a journey of walking in faith, trusting that as we acknowledge Him in our daily lives, He will "make our paths straight."

Prompt

What themes, desires, or burdens keep resurfacing in your heart and mind? Think about what you pray for most often, what problems you naturally try to solve, or what kind of work leaves you feeling most energised.

Exercise: Threads of Calling Map

This exercise helps you identify the core themes that God is stirring in your heart. Write down a few key areas of your life (e.g., family, work, ministry) and connect them to the desires, burdens, or passions you identified above.

Thread 1: Example: A desire for more rest and quiet.

Thread 2: Example: A burden to help struggling postgraduate students.

Thread 3: Example: A passion for writing and research on a specific topic.

Conclusion

The threads you've identified are not random; they are indicators of God's purpose being woven into the fabric of your life. The next step is to anchor these threads in the values that will guide your decisions and help you stay on the path He has set for you.

Values That Anchor Purpose

“But seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things will be added to you.” — Matthew 6:33 (ESV)

Introduction

Now that you have a sense of direction from your spiritual discernment, we will anchor that direction in your core values. Your values act as an internal compass, guiding you toward what matters most. When your actions are in alignment with your values, you can say a purposeful “yes” and a guilt-free “no,” creating a life that is both productive and peaceful.

Teaching

A life lived without clear connection to values is like a ship without a rudder—it is easily tossed about by the winds of other people's expectations and the pressures of the world. As Christians, our ultimate values are to love God wholeheartedly, love others selflessly, and live as ambassadors of His Kingdom. All other values flow from these, such as peace, stewardship, integrity, and rest. By clarifying your top values for this specific season, you create a powerful filter for every decision you face.

Prompt

In this season, what are the top 5 values that you feel God is calling you to prioritise? Consider your faith, family, work, and personal well-being.

Common Values List:

- Spiritual: Faith, Obedience, Prayer, Simplicity, Service
- Relational: Family, Community, Friendship, Love, Compassion
- Personal: Integrity, Rest, Creativity, Joy, Health
- Professional: Excellence, Stewardship, Impact, Learning, Contribution

Examples

To help you get started, here are a few examples of how you might articulate your values for a particular season in a more expanded form:

- Rest: To actively counter the cultural and academic pressure to be constantly busy and productive.
- Stewardship: To manage my time, energy, and gifts as resources entrusted to me by God, not as a means to my own ends.
- Peace: To intentionally replace anxiety and striving with faith and a calm trust in God's provision.
- Integrity: To ensure my work—from research to relationships—is done with a sense of wholeness and transparency that honours God.
- Presence: To be fully present and engaged in the tasks and relationships of my day, rather than being mentally scattered and distracted.

The top 5 values I feel God is calling me to prioritise:

Exercise: Connecting Values to Daily Decisions

Now, it's your turn to apply this thinking to your life in a more practical way. Use the table below to connect each of your top five values for this season to a decision you are currently navigating. This practice will transform your values from abstract ideas into practical tools for guidance.

Top 5 Values	Real-life decision I'm facing	How this value can guide me
Example: Rest	Example: A colleague is asking me to work on a Saturday to meet a deadline.	Example: My value of Rest guides me to say, "I'm not available to work this weekend, but I will be happy to make this my first priority on Monday."

Conclusion

Your values are the guardrails for your God-given purpose. By consciously choosing to live them out, you are laying a foundation for intentional and sustainable productivity. With your values as your compass, we can now move from revelation to a concrete, actionable plan.

From Revelation to Action: The Deep Work Framework

“Do not merely listen to the word, and so deceive yourselves. Do what it says.” — James 1:22 (NIV)

Introduction

Knowing God's will is only half the journey; the other half is acting on it. This is where we move from revelation to a concrete, actionable plan. This section will help you translate a specific spiritual insight into a measurable, time-bound action using the principles of Deep Work.

Teaching

Deep Work, a concept from author Cal Newport, is the ability to focus without distraction on a cognitively demanding task. It's about concentrating your energy to produce high-quality work in a short amount of time. From a faith perspective, this is a spiritual practice of focused stewardship of your gifts. It allows you to honour God with the quality of your work, rather than just the quantity. The Prayer-to-Plan Matrix is a tool to help you schedule and protect time for this type of work.

Prompt

Based on your insights from Sections 1-3, what is one specific, small step of obedience God is asking you to take?

In prayer, God often reveals Himself through a sense of peace, a new thought, or a simple nudging in your heart. This is your revelation. Your part is to take a small, obedient step in response. This is where we will bridge the gap from what you heard in prayer to what you will do. Use the matrix below to translate a specific spiritual insight into a measurable, time-bound action. This is the first step in moving from a vague idea to a clear plan.

Exercise: The Prayer-to-Plan Matrix

What I Heard in Prayer (Your Revelation)	Why It Matters (Connect to Your Purpose/Values)	What Is the One Step I'll Take This Week? (Your Action)	What Is the Time Block I'll Use? (Your Deep Work Session)
Example: I felt a deep sense of peace about the argument I'm developing for Chapter 3 of my thesis. This feeling felt like a gift from the Holy Spirit after a long season of mental struggle.	Example: This clarity confirms my work is on the right path and is an answer to my prayers for wisdom and stewardship. It affirms that my purpose is to trust God with my academic work, not to rely on my own intellectual strength alone.	Example: I will write the first draft of my Chapter 3 introduction and literature review.	Example: Tuesday: 10:00 AM - 12:00 PM. I will turn off all notifications and focus only on writing.

From a Single Action to a Repeatable Practice

It's true that academic life is a tapestry woven with countless tasks, from writing to teaching, to grading and research. It's not realistic to pray about every single task that comes your way. The goal of this exercise isn't to suggest you only do one thing all week, or that every item on your to-do list requires a direct revelation. Instead, this matrix is designed to help you discern the two or three key, high-leverage actions for the week that need spiritual wisdom, not just professional skill. These are the most important tasks that, when completed, make other tasks easier.

Here's how to make it a weekly practice:

- Discern the most important actions: Begin your week by asking the Holy Spirit what the two or three most important actions are that you should focus on. These are tasks that will make the most impact or are tied directly to a spiritual nudge you've received. This is where you use the Prayer-to-Plan Matrix.
- Then, batch the rest: Once you have identified your key actions, you can then move on to the dozens of smaller tasks that fill an academic's life. Use the principle of batching to group these. For example, instead of starting on one of your key actions for a short period, then moving on to your emails, then returning to the important task later, you can complete your deep work during a longer dedicated time block and then do all of your emails, administrative tasks, and meeting follow-ups in a single, batched session later in the day.

Conclusion

By approaching your week with this mindset, you are not only accomplishing your to-do list, but you are also building a habit of listening and responding to God. This rhythm of listening, distilling, and acting is a muscle that strengthens over time, allowing you to walk in a state of grace-filled productivity every day, not just on days when you feel spiritually charged.

Purposeful Rhythms: Batching & Time Blocking

“Whatever you do, work at it with all your heart, as working for the Lord, not for human masters.” — Colossians 3:23 (NLT)

Introduction

A life of purposeful productivity isn't just about doing more; it's about prioritising what matters most while also performing other tasks in an efficient, sustainable way. This section will help you move beyond a few important action steps and into a more holistic system by designing your week with purpose. We will use two powerful productivity principles: batching and time blocking.

Teaching

Batching is grouping similar tasks together to reduce "context switching," which drains your cognitive energy. For example, instead of answering emails, then writing a paragraph, then answering another email, you would batch all your email-answering into a single block of time.

Time blocking is scheduling every minute of your workday. It transforms your schedule from a simple calendar of appointments into a detailed, focused plan for your time. This practice empowers you to be proactive, not reactive, ensuring that your work becomes an act of worship as you steward your time and energy wisely.

Prompt

Set aside some time at the start of every week, before the urgent demands of the week begin to fill your schedule, and prayerfully consider what a sustainable, purposeful rhythm looks like for you. Where will you create space for the spiritual, personal, and professional tasks that matter most? As you fill out the table that is linked on the next page, be intentional about scheduling in:

- Deep Work sessions for your most important projects.
- Shallow Work blocks for administrative tasks like email.
- Rest & Margin for moments of spiritual and physical refreshment.

Exercise: Build Your Spirit-Led Weekly Rhythm

A pre-structured template table has been created for you in Google Sheets so that you can reuse it as many times as you want to block out your ideal week.

Be intentional about scheduling "Deep Work" sessions for your most important tasks, "Shallow Work" blocks for administrative and other smaller tasks, and "Rest & Margin" for moments of spiritual and physical refreshment.

Before creating your own table, it is useful to look at the following example of a weekly schedule that has already been completed:

Once you have looked at the example, you can access your reusable blank template:

How to Create Your Personal Copy

Option 1: In Google Sheets

This is the easiest option. Click the TEMPLATE link above to open the Google Sheet. It will open in your web browser. The file is set to "Viewer" access, which means you'll need to save a personal copy to your own Google Drive before you can edit it.

1. In the top-left corner of the page, click on File.
2. From the drop-down menu, select Make a copy.
3. A pop-up window will appear, allowing you to name the file and choose where to save it in your Google Drive.
4. Click the blue Make a copy button.
5. The new file is now your personal copy, and the original will remain untouched for other readers.

How to Create Your Personal Copy

Option 2: In Microsoft Word or Apple Pages

If you prefer to work offline or in a different programme, you can copy the table directly.

1. Highlight all of the content of the table you wish to use.
2. Copy the highlighted text using the keyboard shortcut Ctrl+C on a PC or Cmd+C on a Mac.
3. Open a new, blank document in your preferred word processor.
4. Paste the text using Ctrl+V on a PC or Cmd+V on a Mac. The table formatting will be preserved.

Option 3: In Microsoft Excel

For a fully editable spreadsheet, you can copy the table into Microsoft Excel.

1. Highlight all of the content of the table you wish to use.
2. Copy the highlighted text using the keyboard shortcut Ctrl+C on a PC or Cmd+C on a Mac.
3. Open a new, blank worksheet in Microsoft Excel.
4. Click on the top-left cell (A1) and paste the data using Ctrl+V on a PC or Cmd+V on a Mac. Excel will automatically separate the columns and rows for you.

Conclusion

Designing a purposeful weekly rhythm is an act of proactive stewardship. By creating space for both deep work and rest, you protect your energy and ensure you are working on what truly matters. In the final section, you will write a Purpose Declaration—a personal mission statement—that will serve as your guiding compass for living this lifestyle of alignment.

Living in Alignment: Your Purpose Declaration

“I am the vine; you are the branches. If you remain in me and I in you, you will bear much fruit; apart from me you can do nothing.” — John 15:5 (NIV)

Introduction

True alignment comes not from our own striving but from remaining in Jesus. When our productivity is rooted in intimacy with Him, we bear much fruit. In the verse above from John 15, "remaining in me" is a powerful invitation to live in a continuous, active, and intentional relationship with Christ. This is the place from which our purpose flows, much like a branch receiving everything it needs directly from the vine. This final section invites you to craft a purpose declaration—a statement that connects your daily routines to your God-given identity and calling. This is not a one-time exercise; it is a declaration you can return to again and again to re-centre yourself.

Teaching

Your purpose declaration is a living prayer and a personal mission statement. It is a powerful tool to remind you of your core values and commitments when distractions or burnout threaten to derail you. As you declare this over your life, you are choosing to walk in step with the Holy Spirit, trusting that He will provide the grace and strength you need to live a life of peace and purpose.

Prompt

What does a life of sustainable, purpose-driven alignment look like in your current season?

Exercise: Write Your Purpose Declaration

Craft a short paragraph that links your intimacy with God to your daily work. Let it be a living prayer and a personal mission statement.

Practise crafting your Purpose Declaration below. Once you are happy with the wording, write it out on the following page and print it out for yourself to keep somewhere where you can regularly see it.

Example: I will live in a state of grace-filled productivity by intentionally creating space for rest and spiritual communion each day, trusting that God's provision is more than enough for my work. I will combat burnout by setting and holding clear boundaries around my working hours and committing to a rhythm of weekly Sabbath. I will honour God with my work by seeking His wisdom, pursuing academic integrity in all things, and trusting that my professional efforts are an act of worship.

My purpose Declaration:

Use some of the sentence starters below to help you get started, then write the final version in the block on the next page:

I will live in a state of grace-filled productivity by...

I will combat burnout by...

I will honour God with my work by...

I will walk in alignment by...

My rhythms will be rooted in...

I will choose peace over pressure by...

My Purpose Declaration

A large, empty rectangular box with a thin black border, intended for writing a purpose declaration. The box is centered on the page and occupies most of the vertical space below the title. The background of the entire page is a watercolor-style illustration of a lush garden with various green leaves, pink and orange flowers, and butterflies.

Moving Forward

A Deeper One-on-One Journey

This workbook is a tool, not a destination.

If you are already working through this resource as part of a coaching journey, we will dive into your specific Prayer-to-Plan Matrix and Purposeful Rhythms to ensure they are sustainable and authentic to your life. We'll work together to turn this framework into a living, breathing system that helps you replace burnout with peace.

If you have purchased this resource separately, you may be ready to embark on a deeper, more personalised one-on-one journey. The From Prayer to Plan coaching package is a Spirit-led journey to help you hear God, align with His direction, and walk forward in your purpose. This journey is not just about productivity or progress—it's about alignment. Across multiple coaching sessions, you'll be supported in deepening your intimacy with God, discerning His leading in your current season, and crafting a plan that reflects both who you are and who He's calling you to become.
