THE EASIEST WAY TO DISCOVER TOP SUPPLIERS FOR YOUR BEAUTY BRAND

BY SHANNON MACK

FOUNDER OF PRETTY SMACK SOCIETY

INTRODUCTION

One of the biggest hurdles for new beauty brand owners is figuring out where to get their product made. The internet is flooded with suppliers, middlemen, and scams—and if you don't know what to look for, you can waste money fast.

That's exactly why I created this playbook. While there are other platforms out there like DHgate, Global Sources, and Made-in-China, I chose to focus on Alibaba because it's the most trusted, accessible, and widely used platform for finding quality suppliers worldwide.

Alibaba allows you to:

- Compare hundreds of manufacturers side by side.
- Order samples before committing to large runs.
- Communicate directly with suppliers and negotiate terms.
- Find suppliers with no minimum order quantity (MOQ) so you can start small.

When I first started Pretty Smack, I thought I needed thousands of dollars and giant bulk orders. What I didn't realize is that many suppliers will happily do small test runs—sometimes even as little as 5-10 units with your logo on them. That flexibility is the difference between being “stuck waiting for money” and actually starting your brand.

This playbook will show you exactly how to navigate Alibaba with confidence, avoid the traps, and build supplier relationships the smart way—just like I've done for years (and yes, once you build trust, many suppliers are willing to move communication over to WhatsApp, which makes things even easier).

STEP-BY-STEP: FINDING & WORKING WITH SUPPLIERS

Step 1: Search Smart

- Use specific keywords in the search bar: Instead of “lip gloss,” type “private label eye cream” — the more specific, the better your results.
- Tap “Manufacturers” at the top: This narrows results to actual factories instead of trading companies or resellers.
- Look for tags like “Low MOQ” or “Verified” on the product cards — they show up right under the price, even if you don’t see traditional filters.
- Use the “Request for Quotation (RFQ)” feature: That button lets you post what you need, and suppliers will come to you with offers — saving you search time

Step 2: Compare 3-5 Suppliers

- Look for consistent quality in their photos, descriptions, and MOQ.
- Request catalogs or product sheets.
- Don’t just go with the cheapest option—balance price with professionalism.
- Check the store reviews. Ensure they have at least a 4.5/5 star rating with recent positive customer reviews.

Step 3: Order Samples

- Always order samples before committing to inventory.
- Budget around $100 to test at least 3 suppliers.
- Pay attention to both product quality and communication style—because you’re choosing a long-term partner, not just a product.

Step 4: Negotiate Minimums

- Ask if they can do a small run (some will go as low as 5–10 units).
- Don’t be afraid to push back politely: “I’m starting small but plan to scale quickly. Can we start with a test run of X pieces?”
- You can also negotiate the cost per unit—the bigger your order, the lower your price per piece will usually be.

Step 5: Verify & Protect Yourself

- Always pay through Alibaba Trade Assurance (never Western Union or direct wire on your first orders).
- Review ratings, years in business, and customer reviews.
- Keep communication in Alibaba chat until trust is established—then, if you’re comfortable, move to WhatsApp for faster communication.

Step 6: Build The Relationship

- Be consistent, respectful, and professional.
- Long-term suppliers will often give you better pricing, faster turnaround, and priority treatment once you prove yourself as a serious buyer.

YOUR NEXT STEP

Action Step

Set aside time this week to search Alibaba and request at least 3 samples. Don't overthink it—get the ball rolling. Once those samples arrive, you'll know exactly who you want to work with, and you'll be one step closer to real inventory. Treat this as practice, not pressure—the goal is to get comfortable with the process, not to have everything perfect. And from the jump, ask your supplier if they can handle larger orders down the line. Even if you're starting small now, you want to know they can grow with you when it's time to scale.

Pro Tip

Suppliers respect consistency. Even if you're starting with a small order, let them know your vision to scale. Building trust now can get you perks like lower MOQs, better prices, and faster production times later.

Motivational Closer

When I started Pretty Smack, I wasted time waiting for “the big money moment.” If I'd known then what I know now, I could have launched years earlier. Don't wait. The money, the supplier, and the opportunity are already within reach—you just have to move.

Stay Connected

When you land your first supplier, tag @PrettySmackSociety and/or myself @TheRealShannonMack—I'd love to see your first samples and celebrate the beginning of your brand journey with you.

Disclaimer

Suppliers, prices, and minimums vary. Always double-check details, request samples, and use Alibaba Trade Assurance for your protection. If you're unsure about contracts or trademarks, consult a professional before scaling.

Now It's Your Turn

The vendors on the following pages are organized by category to help you start faster. You do not need to contact all of them. Choose one product, reach out to 3–5 suppliers, and begin the sampling process. Your goal right now isn't perfection. It's momentum.

Your brand officially begins the moment you send your first supplier message.
