

Princess Vera
and the Magical Tablet

Princess Vera

In the shining Kingdom of Verity, where tall crystal towers touched the clouds, lived a clever young Crown Princess named Vera.

She had a kind heart, a curious mind, and a sparkling golden crown that glowed in the sun.

Princess Vera was sixteen years old, and one day she would become queen.

So when the Royal Messenger announced, “Your Highness, it’s time for the Royal Camp for Future Queens!”

Vera’s heart fluttered with excitement.

“Oh, how wonderful!” she said happily.
“I’ll learn how to lead my people with kindness and wisdom!”

The next morning, Vera packed her royal journal,
her favorite quill,
and her little silver crown.
She hugged her parents,
King Valor and Queen
Vivienne,
and waved goodbye to her friends at the palace gates.

At camp, every day was full of lessons and laughter!
Vera learned how to plan
celebrations,
how to solve problems
fairly,
and even how to calm a
grumpy baby dragon!

But when the stars
twinkled above her tent at night,
Vera began to feel a little lonely.

She missed her home, her parents' warm smiles,
and the laughter of her friends.

One quiet evening, with the moon shining bright, Vera walked to the Wishing Well in the garden.
She whispered softly,

“Oh, wishing well, I miss my family so much. I wish I could see their faces and tell them all about my day.”

The air shimmered with golden light —
and suddenly, a tiny fairy appeared, glowing like starlight!

“Dear Princess Vera,” said
the fairy kindly,

“Your wish is full of love and longing.

I will grant it, with a little modern magic!”

She waved her wand, and poof! — a shiny, glowing device appeared in Vera’s hands.

“This,” said the fairy, “is a Magic Tablet!
Touch the screen, and you’ll see your family and friends,
no matter how far away they are.”

Vera gasped with joy.
When she tapped the screen, it sparkled —
and right before her eyes appeared her parents and
friends,
smiling and waving from the palace!

“Vera! We can see you!” said her mother.
“Tell us everything about the camp!” said her father.

That night, Vera laughed and talked with them for hours.

She shared her stories, her lessons, and her dreams.

The fairy, meanwhile,
visited the palace and gave them matching devices
so they could always stay connected.

From then on, even though Vera
was far away,
she never felt lonely again.

When the Royal Camp ended, Princess Vera returned home wiser and happier than ever.

She had learned that even when we're apart,
love keeps us close —
and with kindness, care,
and a little modern magic,
we can share our hearts across any distance.

Hey! It's me, Princess Vera! Let's have some question time together!

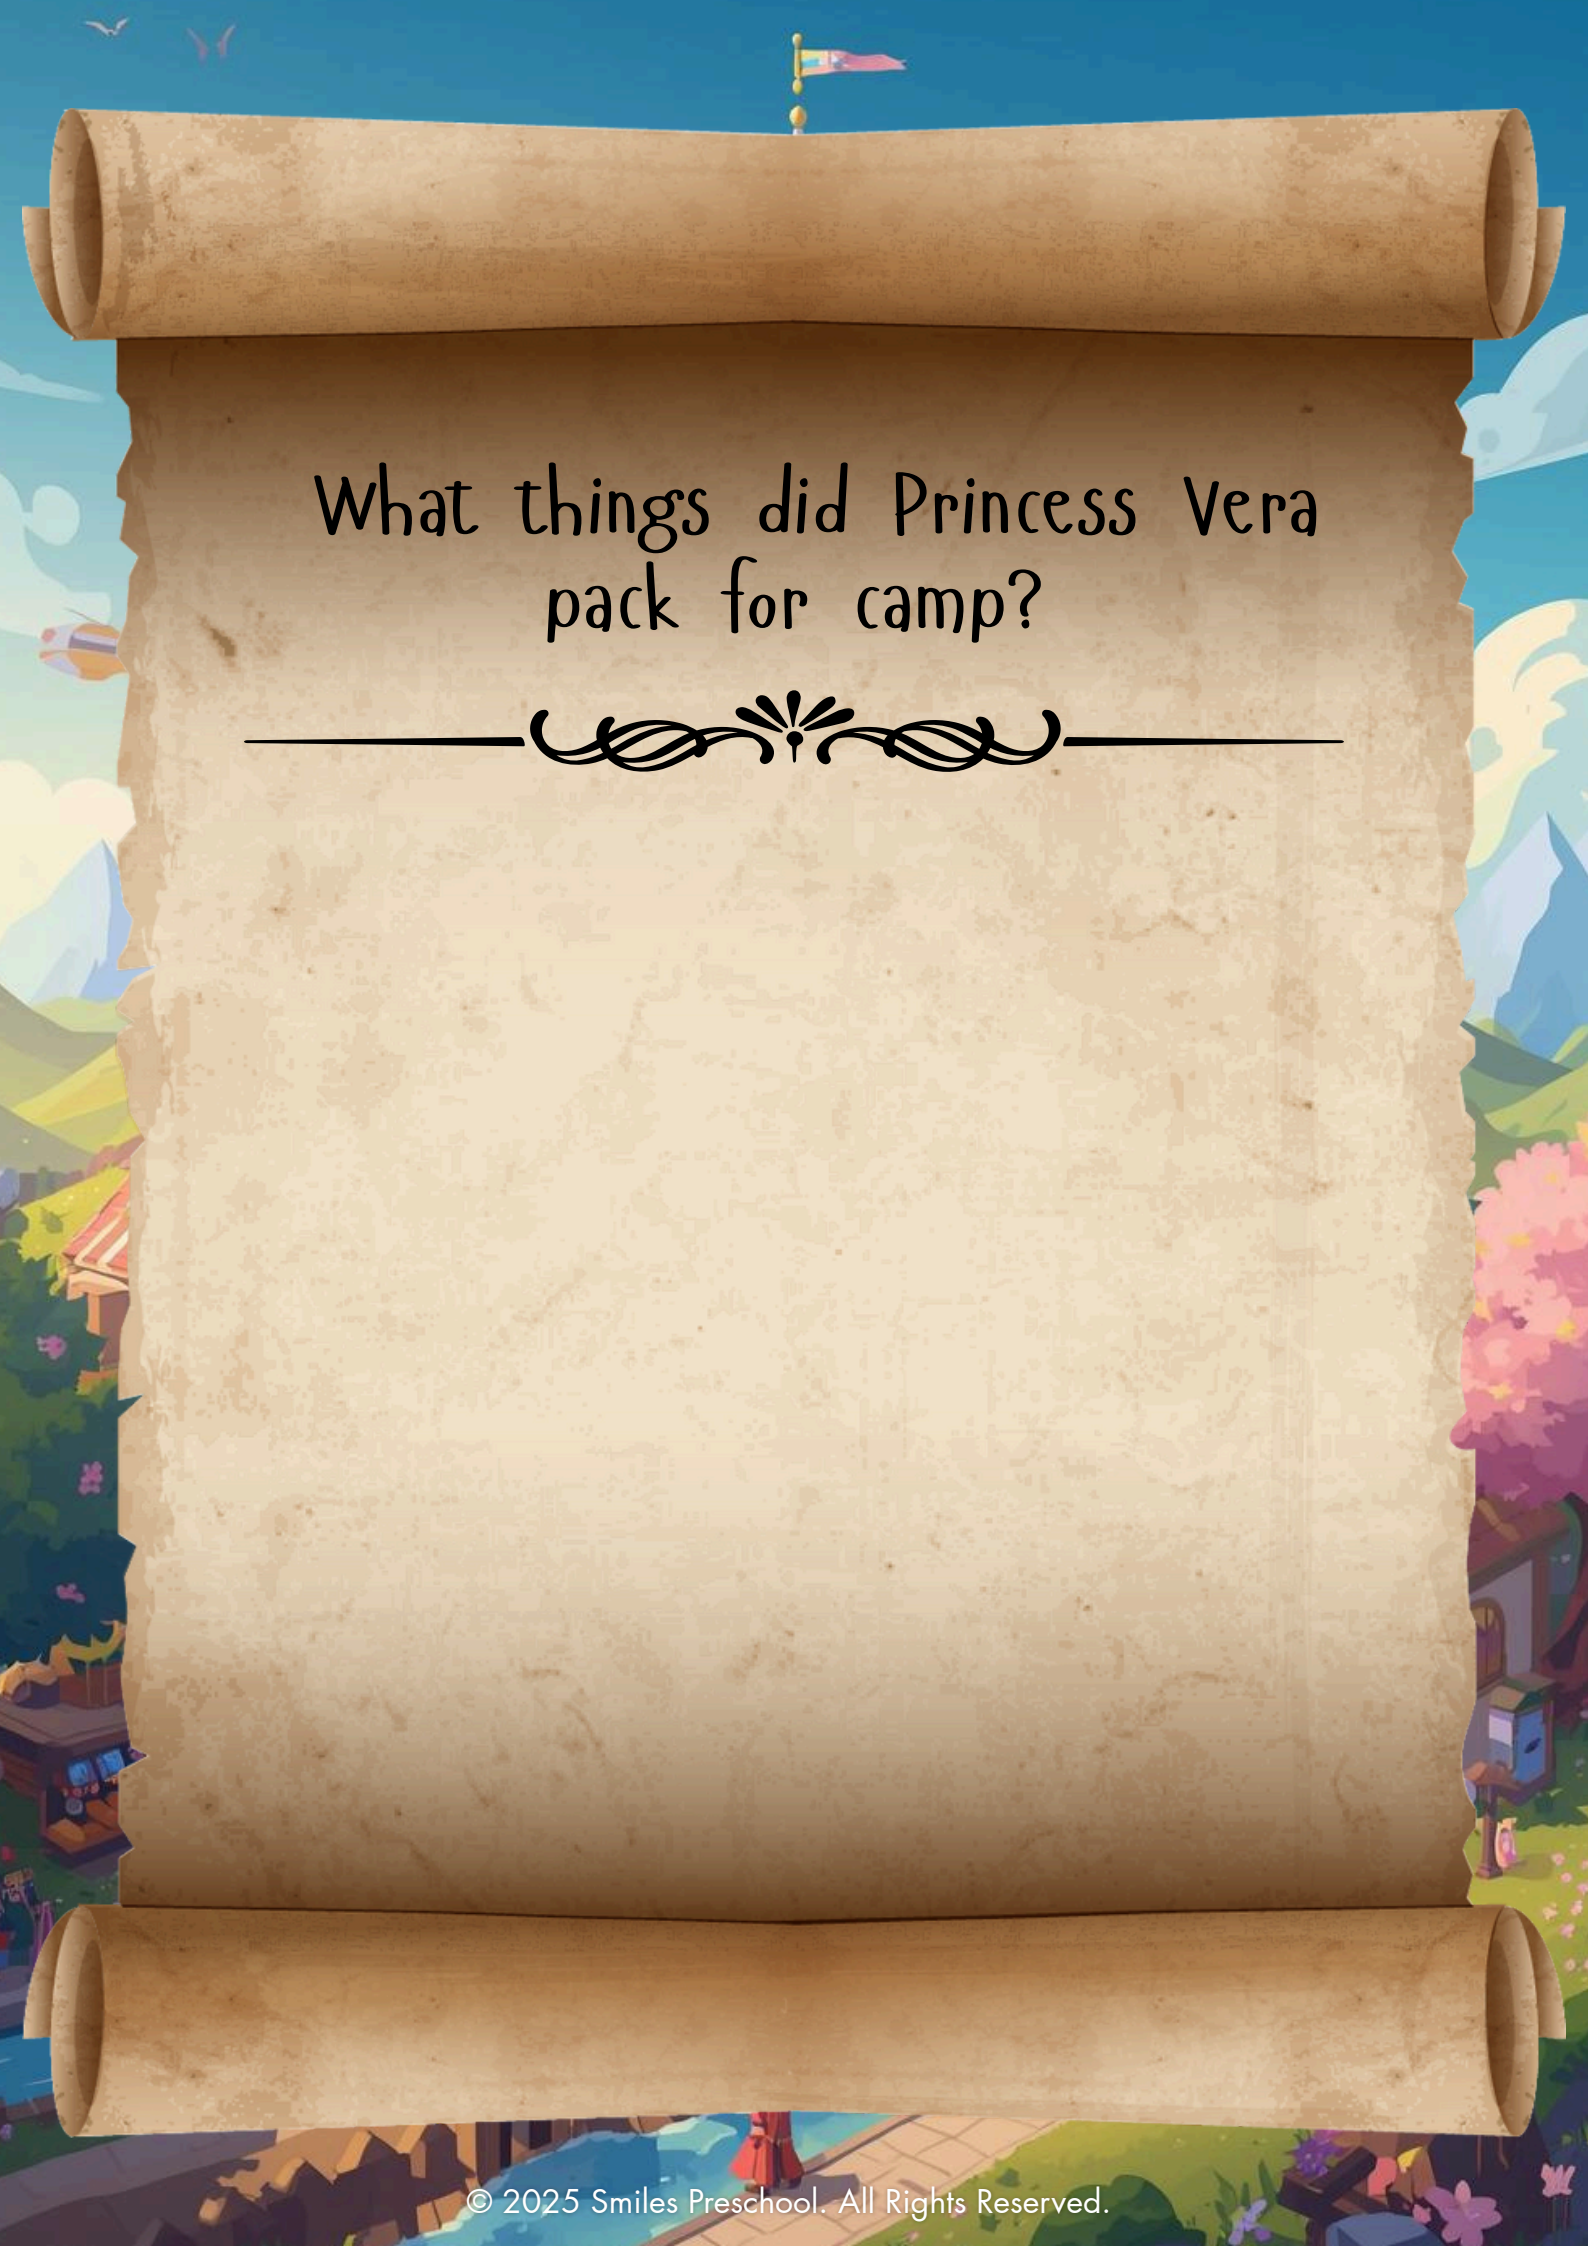

Who is Princess Vera? What makes her special?

A scroll of parchment paper is unrolled, showing a question. The background is a vibrant, cartoon-style illustration of a village with a red-roofed house, a blue pond, and a pink tree. In the distance, there are blue mountains and a flag on a pole. The sky is blue with a few birds.

Where was Princess Vera going for a fun adventure?

A large, unrolled scroll of aged parchment is the central focus. The scroll is set against a vibrant, cartoon-style background of a village with a red-roofed house, a blue pond, and a pink tree. The sky is blue with a yellow sun and a small flag on a pole. The scroll's edges are slightly frayed, and it is held in place by two wooden rollers at the top and bottom.

What things did Princess Vera pack for camp?

What did Princess Vera learn to do at camp?

The sky is blue with a yellow sun, a white moon, and a small flag on a pole. The scroll's edges are slightly ragged, and it is held open by two wooden rollers at the top and bottom.

How did Princess Vera feel at night when she missed her family?

Who appeared when Princess Vera made a wish at the Wishing Well?
