Module 2 – 2nd Week

Questions for Contemplation and Discussion

1. How can we as a community be successful when corporations have so much money, power with government, etc?
2. How to convey this message to children...through picture books and activities. How do we bring responsiveness and support from the parents?
3. How do we respond to animal abuse by sub-cultures/cultures different from ours?
4. Plants have central nervous systems, and are definite conscious beings. How do we respond?
5. How do we spread the vegan message to those close to us who are resistant?
6. How do we tackle the question of foods that are cheap (SAD Diet) and affordability of nutritious plant based diets.(Organic)
7. How can we address the level of frustration that develops with the rest of the world, when they refuse to get it? How to approach the topic of veganism from a place of peace rather than anger?
8. The ethics of right livelihood, specifically those of us who work in restaurants or grocery stores that provide vegan or vegetarian choices, but also provide carnivorous options.
9. Will you help the community forums being richer by expressing that it is ok to disagree as you are searching for answers ... so many people stop when challenged by even loving disagreements or views different from their own?
10. How we respond to the fact that animals kill each other. (I however understand animals reflect our mass collective consciousness and realize that they will follow our lead)
11. What are some of your suggestions on effectively educating people on the world peace diet/cruelty to animals, while remaining sensitive to their belief system?
12. How do you recommend that I get the most out of each lecture? Do I need to follow along in the WPD book or just listen and take notes?
13. What about the Bible and its mixed messages about compassion to animals? How do we best understand the various perspectives, and articulate vegan values to people adhering to the Bible?

14. Why do well-known authors, spiritual teachers, environmentalists, peace and social justice proponents, and health advocates typically ignore the vegan message, or even act with hostility toward it? It seems it should be a natural fit, and would be advocated by these people – what gives?
