

THE MAGNETIC WOMAN COLLECTION

Stop reading into his silence.

The 5 A's test to know, from the facts, whether he's actually into you.

| In 20 minutes you get a clear answer. No guessing, no chasing.
EBOOK EXPRESS

BEFORE YOU START

Two minutes, then we begin.

This isn't a book. It's a fast tool you can use today.

Here's how it works. First you read the 5 A's: five simple things to look at in a man. It takes about ten minutes. Then, at the end, there's a test you fill in about your own real situation. You answer, you count your points, and you get a clear answer.

No heavy theory. Just what you need to stop going in circles.

ONE HONEST THING

This test doesn't predict the future, and it doesn't judge him as a person. It only helps you see the facts more clearly, instead of your fears. The decision stays yours.

THE REAL PROBLEM

He texts you. Then he vanishes.
And you analyze everything.

One text. Left on read. Then silence.

And you spend your days wondering: "what is he thinking?"

You reread the chats. You look for meaning in every word. You ask all your friends. You build a whole story in your head, then another one on top of it.

But the harder you try to guess what's in his head, the more lost you get. Because you're asking the wrong question.

THE SHIFT

Not "what he thinks." But "what he shows me."

Words are up for interpretation. Facts aren't.

You'll never know for sure what he's thinking. And it's not your job to force it out of him.

What you can look at is his behavior. That speaks clearly. It can be counted. And it repeats over time.

THE RULE

A man who's interested shows you with his actions, consistently. If you have to decode him like a puzzle, the answer is already in the puzzle.

The 5 A's are the five facts to look at. Let's go through them.

THE TOOL

The 5 A's

Five things to observe, not to guess.

- Attention — how much, and how, he makes room for you.
- Action — whether he does, or only says.
- Availability — whether you can actually count on him.
- Alignment — whether he wants what you want.
- Attraction — whether there's real desire, or just convenience.

For each one I'll show you the real signal and the false positive — the thing that looks like interest but isn't. Then you put them all into the test.

1 Attention

Does he give you real, steady attention — or only in bursts, when it suits him?

REAL SIGNAL

He remembers the things you tell him. He texts you for no reason at all. He's there on ordinary days, not just late at night.

FALSE POSITIVE

He only surfaces late at night. He goes quiet for days and comes back like nothing happened. Plenty of attention — but only when he's bored.

Real attention is steady. Fake attention comes in waves, and always leaves you waiting for the next one.

2 Action

Does he do things, or only talk about them?

REAL SIGNAL

He suggests and plans. He picks a day. He makes the effort to see you. Words turn into action.

FALSE POSITIVE

"We should totally hang out" that never turns into an actual date. Beautiful promises, zero follow-through.

Watch what he does, not what he promises. Intentions count for little. Steps count for everything.

3 Availability

Can you count on him, or does he keep you on edge?

REAL SIGNAL

He keeps his word. He responds in a way you can predict. You know what to expect, and it lets you relax.

FALSE POSITIVE

Red hot one day, ice cold the next. The push-pull you mistake for passion — but it's just chaos.

Consistency isn't boring. It's the proof that someone is actually there. An emotionally unavailable man will always feel like a maybe.

4 Alignment

Does he want the same thing you want?

REAL SIGNAL

He talks about the future in concrete terms. You both have the same idea of what a relationship is. You're moving in the same direction.

FALSE POSITIVE

He dodges every serious conversation. "Let's just see where it goes," on an endless loop. He keeps you, but never chooses you.

Two people can be really into each other and still want different things. Attraction isn't enough if the direction doesn't match.

5 Attraction

Is there real desire, or just convenience?

REAL SIGNAL

He pursues you, he wants you, and he makes you feel it. He wants you — and he shows it outside the bedroom too.

FALSE POSITIVE

He only shows up for the physical. Present on and off, absent for everything else.

Healthy desire makes you feel chosen. Fake desire makes you feel used — and then unsure.

WATCH OUT FOR THESE

Five things that look like interest.

But aren't. These are the traps almost everyone falls into.

- The midnight "I miss you," followed by nothing.
- The reappearance after weeks, like nothing ever happened.
- Easy compliments that cost him nothing and lead nowhere.
- Breadcrumbs: a text here and there, just to keep you around.
- "I'm just a complicated guy," said to excuse the fact that he doesn't move.

REMEMBER

A spike of emotion isn't a fact. A fact is something that repeats over time. Look at the patterns, not the moments.

NOW IT'S YOUR TURN

The 5 A's test

Think of the person you want to figure out. Read each statement and check the box only if it's been true over the last two months. Then count your checks.

1 • Attention

- ☐ He texts me for no particular reason.
- ☐ He remembers things I've told him.
- ☐ He's around during the day too, not just late at night.

2 • Action

- ☐ He's the one who suggests meeting up, with actual days.
- ☐ The things he says, he actually follows through on.
- ☐ He plans and makes an effort to be there.

3 • Availability

- ☐ He keeps his word almost every time.
- ☐ I know what to expect from him; he doesn't keep me on edge.
- ☐ He doesn't vanish and reappear with no explanation.

4 • Alignment

- ☐ He talks about the future in concrete terms.
- ☐ We want the same thing from a relationship.
- ☐ He doesn't dodge the important conversations.

5 • Attraction

- ☐ He pursues me and makes me feel wanted.
- ☐ He wants me outside the bedroom too.
- ☐ He makes me feel chosen, not like an option.

YOUR RESULT

What the facts say.

12–15	The facts are clear. There's real, steady interest. Nothing to decode. Enjoy it — and don't sabotage it by hunting for problems that aren't there.
7–11	Mixed signals. Something's there, but it's not stable. This is a situationship, not a relationship. Don't fill the gaps for him. Stop chasing, raise your standards, and let him move. Watch for two more weeks.
0–6	The facts say little. You're not the problem — his availability is. You're surviving his silences. You deserve someone who doesn't make you doubt yourself every single day.

Whatever the number, remember one thing: your worth is not his reply. The test tells you where you stand on the facts. What you do with it is your call — now with more clarity than before.

What to do after the test.

A number alone isn't enough. Based on your band, here's the right move, the mistake to avoid, and what to watch in the days ahead.

If you scored 12–15 • strong signals

Do: enjoy it and keep being yourself. Match his moves — don't get ahead of all of them yourself.

Avoid: don't hunt for problems where there are none. Calm isn't boring; it's a good sign.

Watch: that the consistency holds over time, not just in the first few weeks.

If you scored 7–11 • mixed signals

Do: take a step back and leave some space. Stop filling the gaps yourself and see if he fills them.

Avoid: don't turn a "maybe" into a "yes" with your imagination, and don't lower your standards out of fear of being alone.

Watch: over the next two weeks, who makes the first move? Do words turn into dates and action?

If you scored 0–6 • the facts say little

Do: stop. Stop texting first and take back your time and your energy.

Avoid: don't send "one last message" to pull a reply out of him, and don't make excuses for his silences on his behalf.

Watch: if he moves over the next two weeks, you have your answer. If he doesn't, you have it anyway.

IF YOU LANDED LOW

If you're in the 0–6 or 7–11 band, the problem isn't you: it's the chase. There's a way out, and it can be learned. That's exactly what you'll find in the full method, below.

The 7-day protocol.

The test tells you where you are today. This week trains you to look at facts instead of interpreting them. One small thing a day, then you log it in the grid at the end.

Day 1 Count, don't interpret. Write down 3 things he did today. Facts — not what you think they mean.

Day 2 Words vs. action. Did he say something and then actually do it? Mark yes or no.

Day 3 The first move. Today, who texted or suggested plans first?

Day 4 The silence. Was there a silence? How did you react, and what would you have done looking only at the facts?

Day 5 The breadcrumbs. Did a breadcrumb land — a late-night "I miss you," a like, a story view? Did you call it what it is?

Day 6 Consistency. Do his actions this week all point the same way, or zig-zag?

Day 7 The verdict. Reread the six days. What do the facts say, not the hopes? Pick one thing to do next week.

YOUR GRID

Seven days, in black and white.

One line each evening. One real fact from the day, and whether you were looking at a fact or your own interpretation.

AT THE END OF THE WEEK

You'll have seen it with your own eyes, not through your fears. And if the facts say little, you're not the problem: it's the chase. How to get out of it is in the next step.

IF YOU WANT THE FULL PICTURE
