"A mental disorder gives orders. A perceptual gift gives information."

The distinction that changes how a clinician reads a patient.

BIO

Kim Lessage is a medium instructor with over twenty years of experience helping people understand perceptual gifts that fall outside conventional frameworks. Born in France and now based in Houston, Texas, she holds a USCIS EB-1 visa recognized for extraordinary talent. She is the author of Shadow Becoming Light and the creator of the "Orders or Information" clinical framework — a distinction now being introduced to mental health professionals to help them identify the difference between a perceptual gift and a psychiatric disorder. She recently participated in a Yale University bioethics roundtable on transformative experience and the ethics of becoming.

CREDIBILITY

- EB-1 visa — US government recognition for extraordinary talent
- Author of Shadow Becoming Light

TALK TOPICS

FOR CLINICAL / MEDICAL AUDIENCES

"When the Mind Perceives What Medicine Can't Explain"

The diagnostic gap between perceptual gifts and psychiatric disorders — and one question that changes a clinical evaluation.

FOR GENERAL / LEADERSHIP AUDIENCES

"The Cost of Hiding Who You Are"

Twenty years of hiding a real part of myself — what it cost, what it taught me, and how I stopped.

AUDIENCE OUTCOMES

→ A clear, practical distinction between a perceptual gift and a psychiatric disorder — usable immediately

→ An understanding of why history has repeatedly mislabeled human difference as disorder

→ Language for experiences that have never had clinical language before
