

How to Get Seen Every Day on YouTube
(Without Posting More Videos)

THE "OLD WAY" IS BROKEN

THE “VISIBILITY LOOP” IS LEVERAGE

📌 Slide 1: Why the Visibility Loop Works (Even If You’re Starting from Zero)

Visibility creates opportunity. Every comment is a billboard.

- ✓ Free traffic, daily — No ad spend. No algorithm. Just consistent effort.
- ✓ Relationship-first growth — You’re not spamming. You’re showing up where your audience already hangs out and leaving value.
- ✓ YouTube rewards activity — Top comments = free promotion. Some even get pinned or mentioned in videos.
- ✓ Compounds over time — 10 comments/day × 365 days = 3,650 mini touchpoints with your niche.
- ✓ Perfect for building Skool — Every comment links back to your channel or community. Traffic → trust → Skool conversions.

“Instead of fighting for attention, go where it already exists and join the conversation.”

One thing I always do is when I'm potting a plant, I place a coffee filter in the bottom of the pot to prevent the soil from spilling out. Water flow isn't stopped and it keeps the tray clean.

So what would have happened if you didn't snip the top? Less leaf growth?

STEP 3: Write Magnetic Comments

Ask me this (copy-paste template):

"Write a YouTube reply with a hook, a valuable insight, and a curiosity loop to this comment: [insert the comment].
The reply should fit the tone and topic of this video transcript: [insert transcript or summary].
It should sound natural, human, and invite a response or click."

That tells me exactly what to do.

Now, let's apply it to your current comment:

"Can this method be used to revive a small mango plant?"

Based on your transcript, here's a sample reply using that 3-part structure:

Hook:
"Mango plants can come back to life."

Insight:
"This hydrogen peroxide solution is a game-changer for reviving plants. I've used it on my mango plant and it's showing signs of life!"

Curiosity loop:
"If your plant looks like it's giving up, try this trick. You'll be surprised at how well it works."

Here's a sample reply that fits the tone and topic of this video transcript: [transcript has been uploaded].
It should sound natural, human, and invite a response or click.

Hook:
"Mango plants can come back to life."

Insight:
"This hydrogen peroxide solution is a game-changer for reviving plants. I've used it on my mango plant and it's showing signs of life!"

Curiosity loop:
"If your plant looks like it's giving up, try this trick. You'll be surprised at how well it works."

That structure fits the video's theme:

- The hook means necessity but
- The insight delivers real value tied to the video's content
- The curiosity loop sparks engagement and keeps the conversation alive.

What you should do next: 1. Use your transcript to generate a hook, insight, and curiosity loop. 2. Combine them into a natural-sounding comment. 3. Post it and engage with replies.

TIP: The 3 C's of Comment Crafting

Here's a YouTube reply that fits your video's tone (gentle, hopeful, plant-care focus) and uses your 3-part framework:

Hook:
"Totally get that. Some homes just can't have peroxide around."

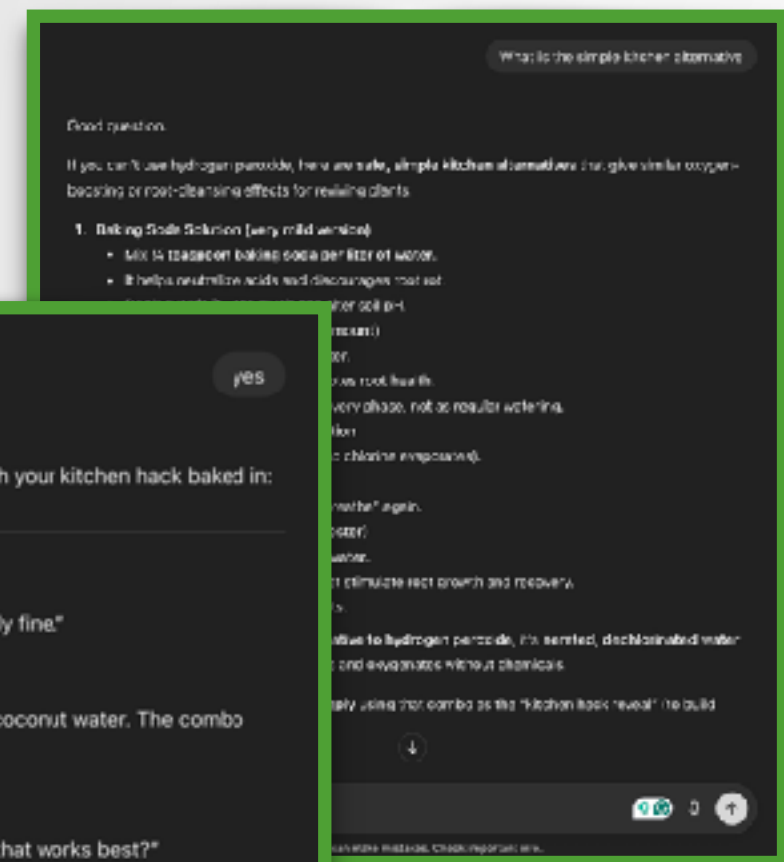

Insight:
"The key isn't the peroxide—it's giving roots clean oxygen. You can do that with fresh, dechlorinated water or even a bit of aquarium-grade oxygen booster."

Curiosity loop:
"Want me to share the simple kitchen alternative I've tested that gives a similar effect?"

That structure hits the trifecta:

- The hook builds empathy fast.
- The insight delivers real value tied to the video's core method.
- The curiosity loop invites engagement and keeps the conversation alive.

Would you like me to rewrite it in a more creator-style tone (friendly expert voice) or keep it comment-section casual (like a helpful fellow viewer)?

"You can get a similar effect with plain dechlorinated water and a splash of coconut water. The combo boosts oxygen and gives roots a natural recovery drink."

Curiosity loop:
"I've even seen it bring wilted herbs back. Want me to share the exact ratio that works best?"

Would you like me to make a shorter version (under 150 characters) for when you want to sound more conversational and boost replies fast?

Clarity: Say something real. Specific.
Credibility: Add one short insight.
Curiosity: Leave an open loop.

You're seeding interest, not selling.

STEP 4: Optimize Your Profile

STEP 5: Engage The Repliers

TIP: Be First. Increase Power.

1. Pick your keyword themes

Choose 3–5 keyword phrases your ideal audience is already searching for.

Example:

- "AI coaching tools"
- "Skool community launch"
- "YouTube recurring revenue"

These are your radar terms — the conversations you want to show up in.

- Set a low views-per-hour threshold so you get notified before videos blow up.
- You'll get an email or push alert whenever a new video starts gaining traction on those topics.

Keep them short, authentic, and useful — not spammy.

Being among the first 5 comments dramatically increases visibility.

Then reply to those who answer.
That activity tells YouTube your comment is valuable and keeps it near the top.

Drop weak topics, double down on the ones producing attention and conversations.

This becomes your Visibility Loop — showing up early, adding value, and turning traffic into community.

Slide 2: Realistic Numbers from the Visibility Loop (12-Month View)

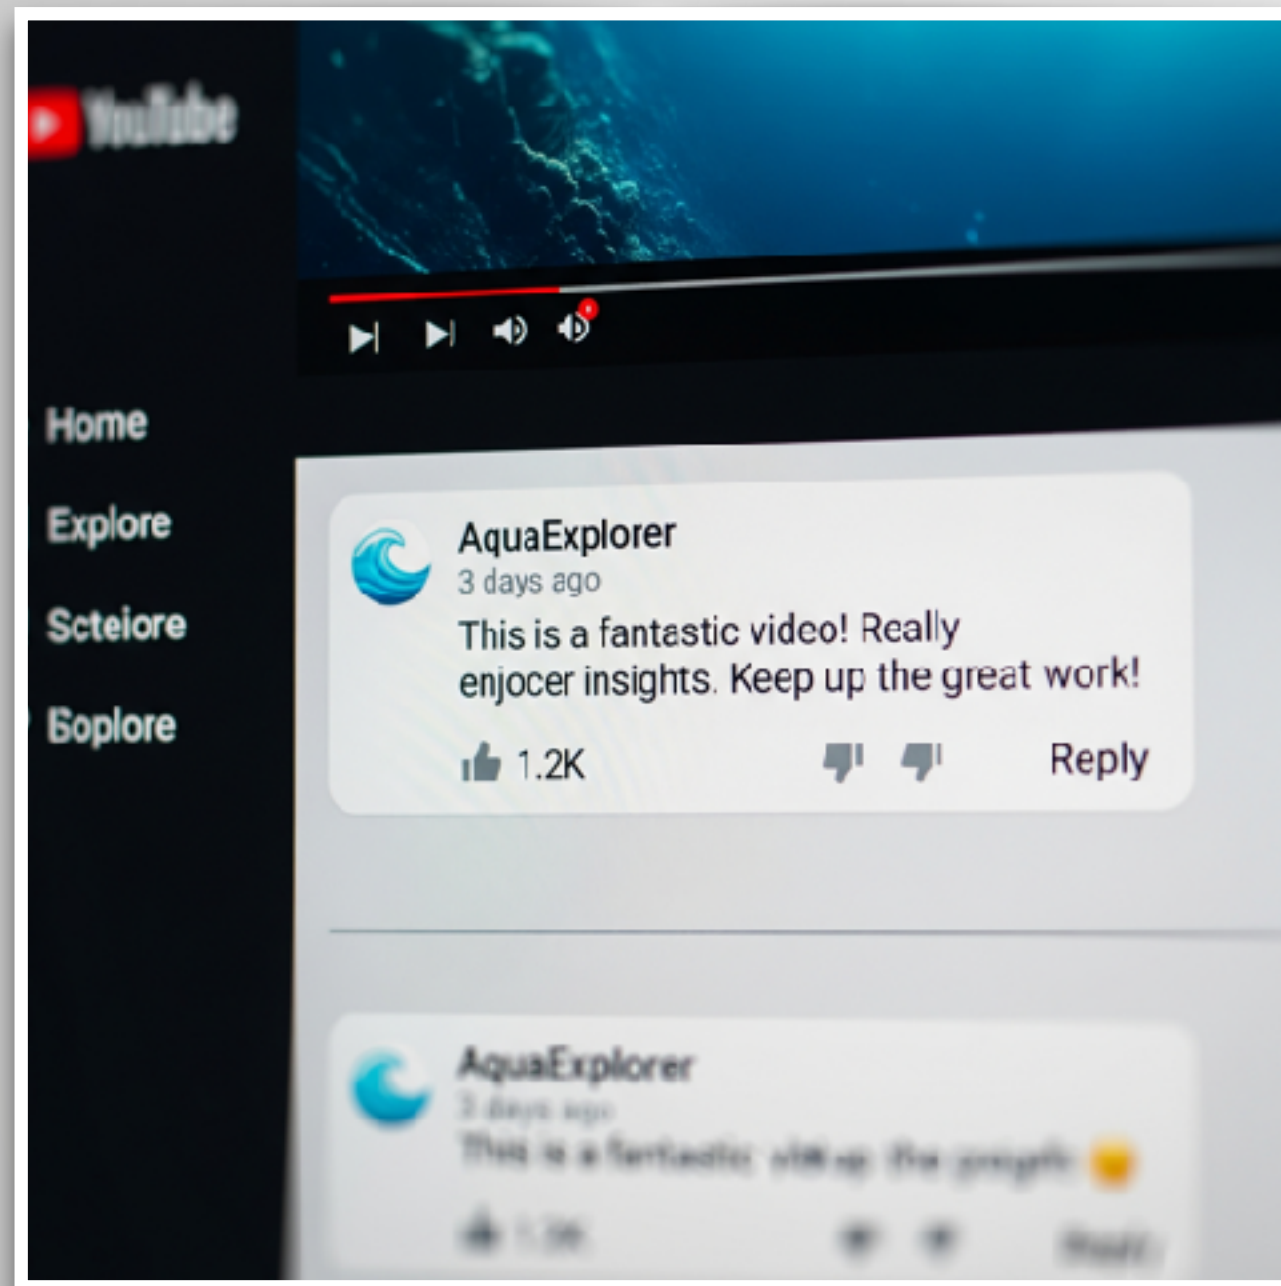

Here's what you can expect with consistent execution:

Metric	Conservative Estimate
Daily YouTube Comments	10
Total Comments (Year)	3,650
Click-through Rate (CTR)	3-6%
Visitors to YouTube Channel	1,000-1,500
Free Skool Signups (10-20%)	100-300 members
Paid Skool Conversions (4%)	4-12 paying members
Avg Product Value	$500-$1,000
Potential Annual Revenue	$2,000 - $12,000 (organically)

Bonus Insight:
Top comments (pinned by creators or ranked highest) often outperform average by 10x — so great comments matter.
