CUSTOMIZABLE SCAVENGER HUNT

MADE WITH SPECIAL NEEDS KIDS IN MIND

TAYLOR HEATON
MOMONTHESPECTRUM.LIFE

Hi,
I'm Taylor. I'm a mom of two autistic kids, and I'm on the spectrum myself.

I wanted to create a scavenger hunt that is easy-to-read, incorporates Disney characters, and is just FUN!

Since I know that all kids on the spectrum are unique, I've created many options below so you can tailor them to fit your family's needs.

Options include:

- Black and white/grayscale version that's easier to read (and easier on your printer!)
- One version with fun fonts and one with simpler, easier-to-read fonts including Open Dyslexic, a font that aids dyslexic people
- Blank cards to create your own
- A version without numbered clues in case there are any that would be confusing to your child or you don't have the location mentioned in the clue
- A "final surprise" announcement card with a blank section where you can write something else in if you're not going to Disney World and just want to have a fun scavenger hunt

Tips

- Laminate your cards if you plan on reusing them
- If your child needs more help understanding where to go, you can write the answer on the back of the card
- Ask an older sibling to read the clues aloud

Clue #1

Elsa invited Anna to tea.
Go to the place where cups should be!

Clue #2

Gaston is upset cuz
he needs more food.
Maybe some eggs
will brighten his mood!

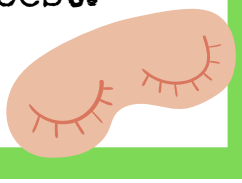

Clue #3

Mickey spilled syrup
all over his clothes.
Go to the place where he can wash those!

Clue #4

Sleeping Beauty is needing some rest.
Go to the place where she might sleep best.

Clue #5

birdhouse for Belle.
Where can he find a hammer and nails?

Clue #6

Olaf's nose fell off in a race.
Where can he go to look at his face?

Clue #7

The genie is wanting to dance all around.
Go to the place where some music is found!

Clue #8

Woody was helping Buzz learn some math.
Help him relax by finding the bath!

Clue #9

Lightning McQueen needs
somewhere to stay.
Where is a place he'd feel at-home today?

Clue #10

Moana says it's time for this hunt to end!
Go to the drawer where we keep all the pens!
