

Food for Thought..

When you order something online, you don't worry about how its going to get to you, who's going to drive the delivery truck, how your package is going to get on a plane, and hope that it'll arrive. You click order, you sit back, and you expect that it will make its way to you because you've done your part in the mechanism of its request.

Zero resistance.

You trust the process so you don't ask why and how. So, stop questioning the ultimate result of your goals. It's happening one way or another. If you know, then you may as well trust fully.

With all my Heart,
Amanda x

