ARTENTION

"ATTENTION IS ALL YOU NEED"

Residing at the nexus of public art and visual display, ARTENTION creates unique commercial installations that act as 'temporary attention engines' to drive engagement with brand identity, promotional strategy and experiential styling - in both retail and leisure environments.

Installations can be a collage of physical, digital, immersive and interactive forms that can extend into lead generation and integrate with CRM.

Everything is sourced under a defining 'Re-Make / Re-Model' sustainability principle.

ARTENTION emerged as a response to the changing ownership structures and ephemeral 'valuation' of art in an attention economy turbocharged by social media.

'Do Androids Dream Of Electric Noise #9'

Cambridge Arts Festival Exhibition, Grand Arcade, Cambridge, Feb 2026

"ArtBeats was very pleased to host Dan's artwork, 'Do Androids Dream of Electric Noise No.9' which we immediately placed in our main shop window.

We noticed that it instantly garnered a lot of attention from passers by who were intrigued by its originality and uniqueness and then came in to find out more."

"What was interesting was that the sculpture being a mannequin allowed people to personify it and view it in a less critical and detached way than might be traditional in the gallery setting.

Becoming interested in the strange instrument it was carrying felt less like observation and more like engagement, as if they were projecting a conversation onto the work...

...Hey, cool instrument... Selfie?"

READY-MADES

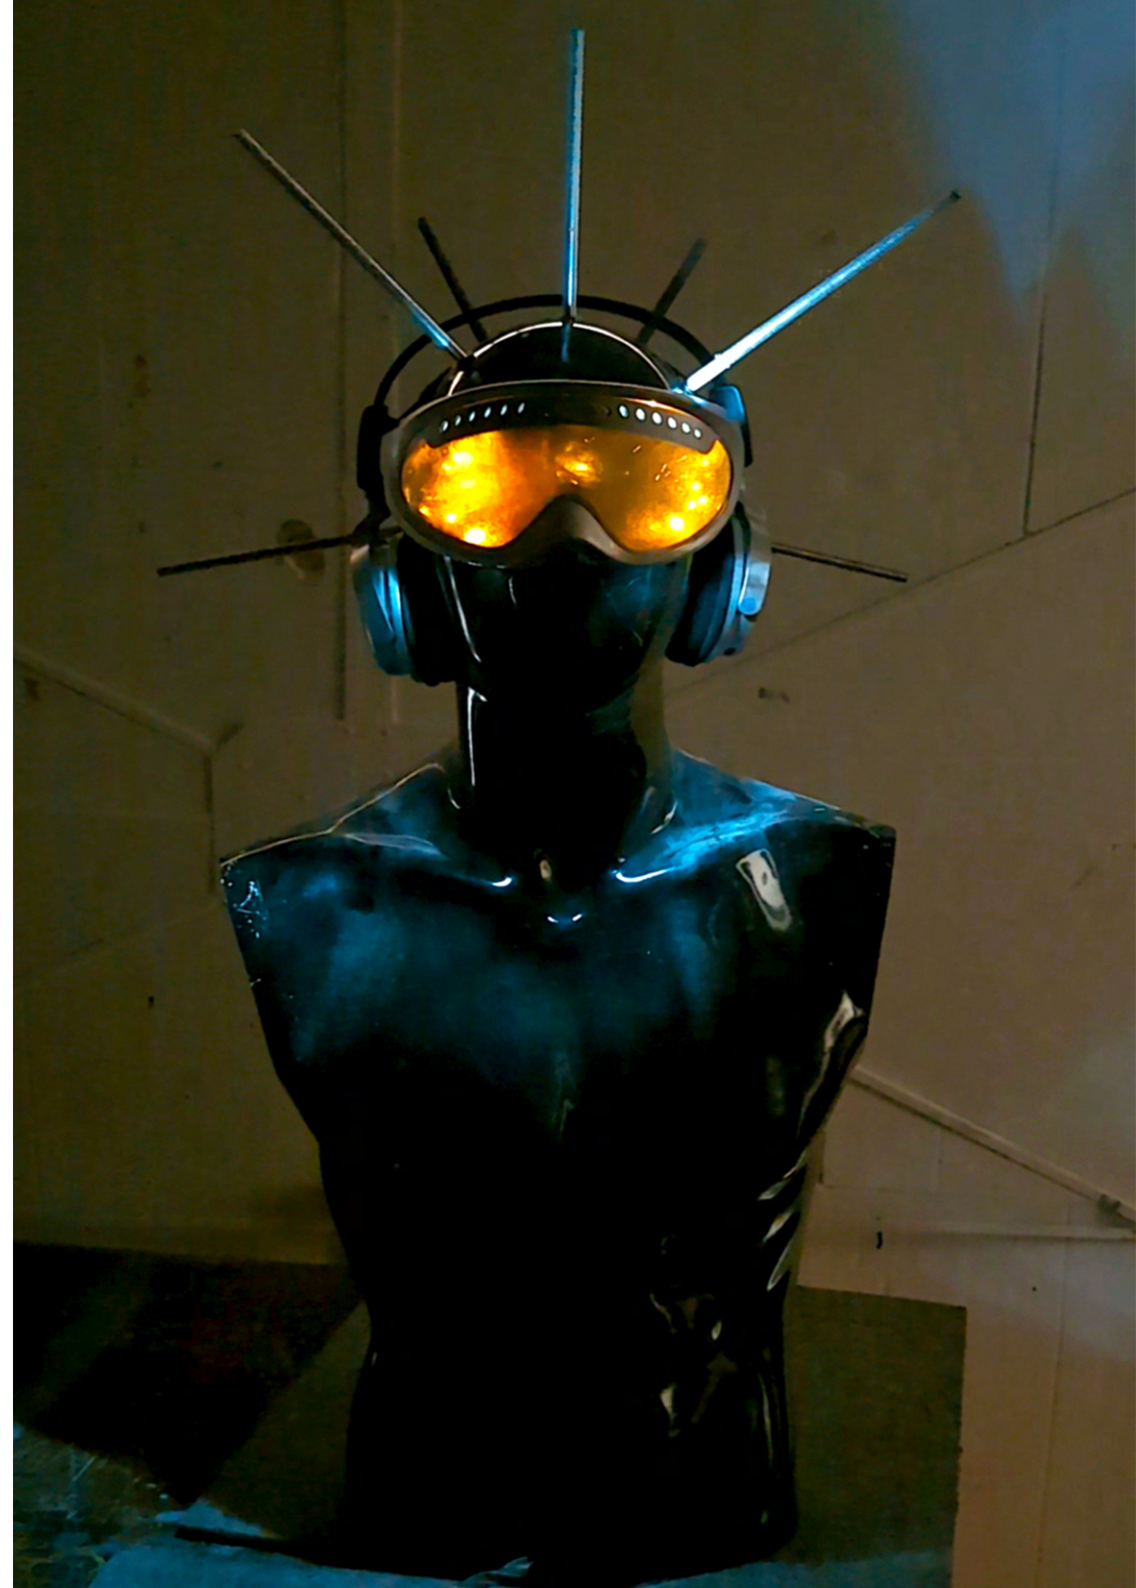

MODERN LIFE IS RUBBISH

Each ARTENTION installation is a collage of end-of-life, recycled, obsolete and/or discarded 'ready-made' materials assembled under a 'Re-Make / Re-Model' sustainability principle.

The act of sourcing, collecting, repurposing, and remixing these constituent parts is fundamental to both the subjective creative process and ultimate output.
