Aligning Your Business with HIS Principles

As a Christian entrepreneur, you aren't obligated to run a business that is specifically faith-based, but it is important to operate with Godly principles such as kindness, fairness, and generosity.

That said, if you are looking to incorporate your faith into your business, there are many ways to do it. Here are a few examples:

- Promote your products to a Christian audience – e.g. Sell clothing with faith-based logos
- Serve Christian clients – Offer copywriting services to Churches, Christian business owners, or faith-based non profits
- Create faith-based digital products like journals, scripture coloring books, or bible studies
- Promote Christian products others have created (affiliate marketing)

Hi! I'm Shari, a Christian Mamapreneur

When my kiddos were tiny, I wanted to spend as much time with them as possible. When my husband and I decided to homeschool, I traded in my teaching career to educate my children at home. The 14 years we homeschooled were such a gift, and God provided for our needs on a single income.

Eventually, I began to look for ways to earn an income working from home to provide for extras. I built a successful freelance writing business online, and more recently, I've been exploring passive income opportunities — specifically creating printable digital products for homeschool moms and affiliate marketing for products I use and love.

I'll always be a teacher at heart.

Now that my homeschooling journey has come to an end, I want to share things I've learned along the way with you.

If you want to learn more about home-based businesses — and tools that will help you run your business successfully, let's keep in touch.

Thank you!
