

WINK

As you can see, Wink is a very small creature, and I wish I could be part of the picture so I could stroke her. Wink's mother was called Blink, and she belonged to Lord Eduardo of Kaylin. Pyrocks lay eggs to reproduce, and when Blink laid an egg, Eduardo allowed Kat to come in daily to touch the egg to prepare a bond with the little creature.

Pyrocks are the best messengers on Pridden, as they can almost instantly transport anywhere among the various lands. No one understands how they evolved, or how they are able to transport themselves.

When Wink matured, she was also able to emit tiny flames of fire in order to protect herself.

She is covered in a layer of downy fur, but her wings are similar to soft leather. Her teeth are sharp and needle-like. Her vocal output is limited to a series of squeaks, chirps, and chirrups, often similar to a bird.

Pyrocks bond with only one person in their lifetime, and if any other touches them, it can cause confusion in the small animals and potentially result in their death.

In order to contact someone, Kat must roll a written message on parchment and insert it in a tube, which is then tied to Wink's leg. Kat gives instructions to Wink where to deliver the message. No one on Pridden understand how pyrocks know where the recipients are. This is one of the mysteries of Pridden and its creatures.
