

JOHNNY DEL VALLE

UNLOCKING ABUNDANCE

A PRACTICAL PATH FROM SCARCITY TO PROSPERITY USING THE SCIENCE OF GETTING RICH

Introduction

What if I told you that wanting more, more money, more freedom, more time, more love, is completely natural? It is not greed. It is not selfish. It is how you were designed. And here is the truth. You already have the ability to create it.

So why does it feel so hard for so many people? Because most were never taught how wealth really works. The real principles of abundance have often been passed quietly from experience or hidden in books that only a few ever read. If you have not had that exposure, it is not your fault. You simply have not had access to the right information until now.

My story may be different than most. I came from nothing, yes, but from a very young age I had access to powerful ideas. I devoured books and recordings that planted in me the belief that life could be designed with intention. Those ideas helped me learn how to flow with opportunities in ways that felt natural.

The challenge was not whether I could succeed. The challenge was understanding how it was happening. I often found myself bouncing back and forth, sometimes flowing effortlessly, other times chasing in circles. Results would show up, and it felt almost like magic, but I could not quite explain why.

That mystery drove me into a lifelong curiosity. I became, in a sense, an engineer of abundance, someone determined to break down the principles behind the results. If I could understand how it really worked, I could not only reproduce it for myself but also teach it clearly to others.

One of the books that first opened my eyes was written more than 110 years ago, The Science of Getting Rich by Wallace Wattles. Its principles confirmed much of what I had already experienced, but also gave me a language to explain it.

Over time, I blended those timeless truths with my own experience and with modern insights from science, psychology, and business.

This book is the result. It is not theory, and it is not hype. It is a clear process that anyone can follow to align peace of mind with prosperity in money, health, relationships, and freedom.

Here is my promise. If you apply these principles, they will work. This is not luck or chance. It is a process, tested, proven, and repeatable.

If you are looking for shortcuts or “get rich quick” tricks, this is not the place. But if you are ready to align your mind, your body, and your soul or emotions with the natural laws of abundance, this book will guide you there.

Read carefully. Practice boldly. Test these principles in your own life. The results will not only speak for themselves, they will transform you.

Because abundance is not late. You are not behind. And the keys have been in your hand the whole time.

Chapter 1:

Your Right to Be Rich

Many people say money is not everything or it is better to be poor and happy. While money alone does not create happiness, it plays a vital role in helping us live fully. Without it, even the basics of life like good food, safe housing, and the ability to learn or grow become limited.

Money makes many things possible. It allows you to eat nourishing meals, live in a place of comfort, and expand your mind through books, classes, and travel. It creates opportunities to enjoy time with loved ones, share generosity, and give back. Without enough money, these natural parts of life are restricted.

Life is designed for growth. A seed becomes a tree. A child learns and grows stronger. You are no different. You were created to expand in body, mind, and emotions, and to do this you need resources. Money is the tool that makes expansion possible. Wanting wealth is not greedy; it is natural. It is your way of reaching for a fuller life.

Everything you enjoy in the modern world began as raw material. A building, a phone, or a meal all started as something simple. Abundance provides the raw materials, and human beings apply thought and action to shape them into useful things. This shows that abundance is already here, waiting to be worked with. The power of abundance, given by God, is this constant flow of raw material and opportunity. Our role is to think clearly and act deliberately to bring it into form.

Being rich does not mean chasing symbols of status. True richness means having enough to become your best self. It means taking care of your health, continuing to learn, experiencing joy, and sharing freely with others. To live in balance, all parts of you, your body, your mind, and your emotions must be nourished. If even one part is ignored, life feels incomplete.

Your desires are not something to feel guilty about. They are signs of life moving forward in you. A desire for more health, knowledge, love, or joy is abundance urging you to grow. The desire for wealth is simply the desire to live more completely, and that is something to celebrate.

Behind this process is the power of abundance, the creative force that responds to thought, faith, and action. When you align yourself with peace in your heart, clarity in your mind, and intentional steps forward, you connect with this power. You step into your role as a co-creator, shaping the life you envision.

This is why wealth is your right. It is not about taking from others but about stepping into the design you were given. Abundance was created so life could keep expanding. When you embrace your desires, act with faith, and live in alignment, you not only grow but also inspire and lift others. The best gift you can offer the world is to become the best version of yourself, and that requires abundance.

Think and Do

- Recognize your desires as natural. Instead of questioning why you want more, see each desire as life calling you to grow.
- Identify three areas of growth. Ask yourself, if I had all the money I needed, what would I do to expand my body, my mind, and my emotions? Write these down.
- Notice the raw materials around you. Look at the things you use daily. A phone was once metal in the ground. A home was once wood and stone. Abundance provides the material, and thought and action turn it into wealth.
- Keep your vision in front of you. Place your list where you will see it often. Let it remind you that abundance is not about greed. It is about living fully and stepping into your role as a co-creator with the power of abundance.

Chapter 2:

The Science of

Getting Rich

Many believe that becoming rich is a matter of luck, talent, or being born into the right family. But wealth does not come by chance. It follows specific principles, much like mathematics or science. Just as two plus two always equals four, abundance responds in predictable ways when those principles are applied.

The truth is simple: people become wealthy by doing things in a certain way. Those who do not follow this way, no matter how hard they work or how gifted they are, often remain poor. But anyone who learns and applies these principles can achieve wealth with the same certainty as solving a math problem.

Proof of this can be seen everywhere. Two people may live in the same neighborhood and work at the same job. One prospers while the other struggles. The difference is not the job or the environment—it is the way each person thinks and acts. The same is true with talent. Many highly skilled people remain poor, while others with less talent but a clearer method grow rich.

This shows that wealth is not decided by natural ability, location, or luck. It depends on whether a person learns to follow the Certain Way, which is the mindset of faith. Faith here means acting with clarity and intention toward a vision, even before you know exactly how it will unfold. It is more than positive thinking. Positive thinking says, “I hope it works out.” Faith says, “I know it will work because I am aligned with the power of abundance.”

Getting rich is not about hoarding, taking from others, or being stingy. True wealth comes from aligning your thoughts, choices, and actions with the laws that govern abundance.

These laws are the system God built into creation, designed to respond to thought and deliberate action.

If you can read and understand these words, you already have the ability to get rich. It does not matter if you are strong or weak, highly educated or not. What matters is learning to think and act in the Certain Way.

In the end, wealth is not about the career you choose or the place you live. People grow rich in every kind of work and every kind of community. The constant factor is the same: the way they think, the way they act, and the faith they carry. That is the science of getting rich.

Think and Do

- Look around you. Notice how some people succeed while others in the same situation do not. Ask yourself, what are they doing differently?
- Challenge the myth of luck. Write this truth where you can see it often: Wealth follows laws, just like science.
- Adopt the Certain Way. Begin to believe that if you think with faith and act with intention, you too can become wealthy, no matter where you are starting from.

Chapter 3:

Is Opportunity Gone?

It is easy to believe the world has run out of opportunities. Many people feel that the best chances are already taken, or that wealth is locked away by powerful groups. But this is not true. No one stays poor because opportunity has disappeared.

Opportunities are not fixed, they move and shift as society changes. When one field becomes crowded, another begins to open. History proves this. Railroads were once the newest and greatest industry. Later, electric power transformed transportation again. Soon after, air travel created possibilities no one had imagined before. Today, new technology and ideas continue to reshape the world.

This shows that opportunity is never used up. It flows into new places, waiting for people who are ready to act in the Certain Way. What looks like a closed door is often the sign of another door opening.

The raw materials of life are endless. Building materials, food supplies, energy sources, and creative ideas will never run out. They continue to renew and multiply. Poverty does not exist because the world lacks resources. Poverty exists only when people fail to follow the principles that lead to abundance.

For this reason, you should never be discouraged by the success of others. One person's gain does not block yours. In fact, when more people create wealth, new possibilities open for everyone. Opportunity is always expanding because life itself is always expanding.

So do not be fooled into thinking there is no space for you. God created the power of abundance to keep flowing forward. New doors are always opening for those who think clearly, act intentionally, and live by faith in the Certain Way.

Think and Do

- Challenge the scarcity mindset. When you feel like chances are gone, remind yourself: Opportunity never disappears, it simply moves.
- Look for new doors. Pay attention to changes in technology, culture, or local needs. Ask yourself: Where is growth beginning to appear?
- Release envy. Instead of seeing another person's success as a threat, use it as proof that success is possible. Say to yourself: If they can do it, so can I.

Chapter 4:

The First Principle

Thoughts Create Things

Everything begins with a thought. Behind every invention, building, or work of art was first an idea in someone's mind. Wealth is no different. To create abundance, you must first understand that thought is the starting point of everything you desire.

God designed life with a creative power that responds to thought. When you hold a clear picture of what you want, joined with faith and gratitude, this power begins shaping your vision into reality. This is not imagination alone, it is the process of creation. A house begins as a picture in the mind of its builder. Over time, thought directs materials and people into action until the picture becomes real.

This is why your mind is your most valuable tool. What you think about consistently will become part of your life. If you dwell on lack, you will experience lack. If you dwell on growth and wealth, the power of abundance will bring circumstances that lead you there.

It is important not to be misled by appearances. You may see poverty around you, but the truth is that abundance is always present. You may see struggle, but opportunity is waiting as well. Thinking in the Certain Way means choosing to focus on abundance even when it is not yet visible.

This is the first principle of the science of getting rich. Your thoughts create your reality. When you direct your mind toward what you truly want and combine that vision with faith and gratitude, you unlock the power of abundance that God placed in the world.

Think and Do

- Watch your thoughts. Notice what fills your mind each day. Are your thoughts focused on problems, or on possibilities?
- Hold a clear picture. Choose one desire, big or small. Imagine it in detail and see yourself enjoying it.
- Replace appearances with truth. When faced with lack, remind yourself: Abundance is real. Growth is real. My thoughts connect me to it.

Chapter 5:

The Purpose of Life is Growth

Life always moves toward growth. A seed pushes through the soil to become a tree. A child learns new skills and grows stronger each year. You too are designed to expand. The desire for more is not greed, it is life itself urging you forward.

When you feel the desire for wealth, it is not about selfishness. It is a signal that you are meant to live more fully. The longing to travel, to learn, to enjoy beauty, or to help others is abundance expressing itself through you. These desires are the way God's power of creation flows into your life.

Real growth is not about chasing empty pleasures. It is about becoming more in body, mind, and emotions. Money allows you to do this. With it, you can take care of your health, continue learning, build strong relationships, and experience joy. Without enough money, these natural desires are restricted and life feels smaller than it should.

Abundance is not something you have to fight for. It is already present, ready to be shaped by your thoughts and actions. God created life with this design so that growth would always be possible. Your dreams are not separate from this plan, they are part of it. You are not competing for limited resources—you are aligning with an unlimited source.

Old ideas suggested that poverty was holy or that suffering was part of your purpose. This is not true. By becoming more stronger, wiser, and happier you are better able to give. You cannot share joy if you have none. You cannot lift others if you are weighed down by lack. Your responsibility is to make the most of yourself, and that requires abundance.

Think and Do

- See your desires as natural. When you want more, remind yourself: This is life moving through me. Growth is my purpose.
- Check your motives. Ask: Does this desire help me grow in body, mind, or emotions? If yes, it is aligned with abundance.
- Shift from competition to creation. Instead of worrying about what others have, focus on creating more for yourself and those around you. Tell yourself: There is enough for everyone, including me.

Chapter 6:

How Riches Come to You

Wealth does not come from tricks, unfair deals, or taking from others. Real riches come when you create value that benefits people. The rule is simple: always give more in use than you take in money.

Think about it this way. If you buy a book that costs only a few dollars but it teaches you ideas that help you earn thousands, you have received far more value than the price you paid. This principle applies in business, work, and life.

When you move from a competitive mindset to a creative one, you stop asking, How can I win while someone else loses? Instead, you begin to ask, How can both of us be better off because of this exchange? That shift opens the door to wealth. Every deal, every relationship, and every project becomes an opportunity to create growth for everyone involved.

You should also never feel ashamed of asking for what you want. Your desires are not selfish. They are the way abundance moves through you. When you want a new skill, a better home, or a joyful experience, it is the power of creation urging you forward. Asking is not wrong, it is part of growth.

Riches will not appear instantly, but they will come in real and practical ways. God designed the power of abundance to respond to faith and action. When you hold a clear mental picture of what you want, believe it is already on its way, and act in ways that create value, opportunities will align. What you desire will arrive—sometimes in ways you never expected.

Think and Do

- Redefine value. Look at your work or business. Ask yourself: Am I giving people more in value than I take from them in money?
- Create win-win exchanges. The next time you make a deal or decision, check if both sides benefit. If the answer is yes, you are on the creative path.
- Release guilt about wanting. Write down three things you deeply desire for your body, your mind, and your emotions. Remind yourself: These desires are the power of abundance guiding me to grow.

Chapter 7:

The Power of Gratitude

Gratitude is more than good manners. It is a law of abundance. When you give thanks, you stay connected to the source of wealth. Without gratitude, that connection weakens and growth slows.

Think of gratitude as a bridge. Every time you feel thankful, you strengthen your link to the power of abundance that God built into life. The more you notice what is good and give thanks for it, the more good things flow into your experience. A grateful mind sees opportunity, while an ungrateful mind sees only problems.

Gratitude also protects you from falling into competition. When you are thankful, you focus on creation and growth instead of worrying about what others have. You recognize the abundance already present and expect more to come. Gratitude shifts your attention from lack to increase.

Faith itself is strengthened by gratitude. A grateful person expects good things, and that expectation builds the trust needed to hold a vision of wealth. Without gratitude, doubts creep in. With gratitude, your confidence grows.

History shows us that great teachers gave thanks before receiving what they asked for. Gratitude is not something you wait to express until after success arrives. It is part of the creative process itself. Saying thank you is a way of affirming that what you desire is already on its way.

When you live in gratitude, even challenges become part of your growth. Instead of complaining, you see how each circumstance can prepare you for more. Gratitude is not only the key to receiving wealth but also to living with peace, joy, and strength along the way.

Think and Do

- Start a gratitude list. Each day, write down three things you are thankful for. They can be small or large. This simple act keeps you connected to abundance.
- Give thanks before you receive. When you picture your goals, say “thank you” as if they have already arrived. This strengthens your faith.
- Shift focus with gratitude. The next time you feel like complaining, stop and name one good thing about your situation. Let it guide your emotions back toward growth.

Chapter 8:

Thinking in the

Certain Way

To unlock abundance, you must learn to think in a clear and definite way. Many people have vague wishes like “I want to be rich” or “I’d like a better life.” But unclear wishes do not create results. Wealth begins with a focused thought.

Think of it like sending a message. If you send random letters, no one understands. But if you write a clear sentence, the message is received. The power of abundance works the same way. A clear mental picture of what you want is far stronger than scattered or uncertain thoughts.

Once you know what you want, hold that picture in your mind with faith and gratitude. Imagine yourself already living the life you desire. Think and speak as if it is real right now. This combination of vision and gratitude impresses your image onto the power of abundance, and creation begins to unfold.

You do not need to spend hours forcing yourself to visualize. True desires stay with you naturally. If your dream excites you, your mind will return to it again and again. The important part is to keep your vision alive with confidence, not doubt.

Avoid the trap of begging or repeating empty wishes. Asking the same thing over and over does not create results. Faith does. Faith means trusting that what you desire is already being shaped for you, even before you see the evidence. Gratitude confirms that trust.

The Certain Way of thinking is simply this: hold a clear vision, strengthen it with gratitude, and act with faith. This is how God's power of abundance responds to you. It is not just wishful thinking, it is the original mindset of creation.

Think and Do

- Clarify your vision. Write down exactly what you want, whether it is a home, a business, or a new experience. Be as specific as you can.
- See it as real. Close your eyes and imagine yourself already enjoying what you desire. Notice how it feels.
- Add gratitude. Each time you think of your vision, say "thank you" as if it is already here. This keeps you aligned with the Certain Way.

Chapter 9:

How to Use Your Will

Many people misunderstand willpower. They think it means forcing others to do what they want or controlling the world around them. But true willpower has nothing to do with bending others to your wishes. Using force to control people will never create lasting abundance.

The real purpose of willpower is to guide your own mind. Your will is like the guard at the gate of your thoughts. It protects your vision from distractions, doubts, and fears. When you know what you want, willpower helps you stay committed to that vision, even when appearances suggest otherwise.

This is why you must be careful about what you allow into your mind. If you dwell on poverty, you strengthen poverty. If you constantly read or talk about failure, your mind drifts toward failure. But if you direct your attention toward growth and wealth, your willpower keeps you steady on that path.

The poor do not need pity as much as they need inspiration. Charity can provide temporary relief, but it does not solve the problem of poverty. What truly helps people is the belief that they too can create wealth by following the Certain Way. When you live in alignment with abundance, you become that example. Your success shows others what is possible.

So remember, your will is not for forcing results. It is for holding your thoughts steady, keeping them aligned with God's power of abundance. When you master this, you stop reacting to appearances and instead act with confidence. You become a creator instead of a competitor, and abundance flows more freely into your life.

Think and Do

- Use willpower as focus. Each time doubt creeps in, say to yourself: My will is to hold my vision of abundance. Repeat until your focus returns.
- Guard your attention. Choose what you read, watch, and listen to carefully. Protect your mind the way you would protect something valuable.
- Inspire by example. Do not try to control others. Show them what is possible by living your own life in alignment with abundance.

Chapter 10:

Further Use of the Will

The greatest challenge in creating wealth is not in the steps themselves but in keeping your mind steady when distractions, doubts, or negativity appear. This is where the deeper use of willpower comes in.

Do not waste your energy on thoughts of poverty, failure, or past mistakes. These thoughts tie you to the very conditions you want to escape. Your past does not define your future, and the more you revisit it, the more power you give it. Instead, use your will to keep your attention on what you are creating now and the future you are moving toward.

The same is true of how you see the world. Many voices insist that society is broken, that opportunities are shrinking, or that decline is everywhere. Do not let those ideas take root in your mind. Life is always moving forward. Challenges exist, but progress is greater. When you direct your thoughts toward growth, you become part of that progress.

Another way your will protects you is by keeping you from rushing. Hurry comes from fear—the fear that opportunities will run out or that you will fall behind. But God’s power of abundance is unlimited. There is more than enough for everyone. The right opportunities will arrive at the right time. Use your will to remain steady and patient, moving with confidence instead of panic.

Your will is like a compass that keeps you on course. It points you toward your vision and prevents you from being pulled off track by fear or negativity. The more you practice this, the stronger your faith becomes, and the faster abundance flows into your life.

Think and Do

- Release the past. When old failures rise in your thoughts, say: That is behind me. I am creating something new. Then shift your focus to your vision.
- Filter what you take in. Read and listen to content that lifts your mindset. Avoid constant voices of fear, lack, or decline.
- Move without hurry. Each day remind yourself: Abundance is unlimited. My opportunities are secure. Let this guide your actions calmly and confidently.

Chapter 11:

Acting in the

Certain Way

Thought is the starting point of creation, but thought alone is not enough. To unlock abundance, you must combine clear thinking with purposeful action. Many people believe they can simply wish for wealth and wait for it to arrive, but without action, even the clearest vision remains only a dream.

God's power of abundance flows through natural channels—through people, opportunities, and the circumstances of life. Your thoughts set this process in motion, but your actions prepare you to receive what you desire.

This means you must act where you are, right now. Do not wait for the perfect job, the perfect business idea, or the perfect moment to begin. Every situation you are in offers chances to act in the Certain Way. Even if your current role feels small, it can be the stepping stone to greater opportunities if you handle it with faith and intention.

The key is to give your best effort to what is in front of you. When you act with purpose and faith in your present situation, you open the door to the opportunities that lead you forward. Neglect the present, and you delay the future.

Acting in the Certain Way also means giving more in value than you take. When your actions consistently bring growth and benefit to others, you place yourself in harmony with the power of abundance, and wealth naturally flows back to you.

Abundance does not come to those who simply wait. It comes to those who think clearly, hold their vision with faith, and act with purpose in each moment.

Think and Do

- Act where you are. Look at your current job, business, or situation and ask: What can I do today to give my best effort? Then do it.
- Stop waiting for perfect. Replace the thought I'll begin when things improve with I create my future by acting now.
- Add value. Each day, look for one way to give more than expected—through service, kindness, or quality of work. This keeps your actions aligned with abundance.

Chapter 12:

Efficient Action

Abundance does not come from doing everything at once. It comes from doing the right things in the right way at the right time. Many people stay busy but make little progress because their actions are scattered. True success comes from efficient action—giving your full energy and focus to each step in front of you.

Every day offers opportunities to move closer to your vision. If you neglect today's opportunities, you lose ground. Success is built step by step, and even the smallest actions matter. You may not see the full result of one effort, but that effort may connect to forces you cannot see, opening doors later. This is why doing your best in the present moment is so important.

Efficiency does not mean overwork. Rushing, cramming tomorrow's tasks into today, or exhausting yourself does not create abundance. In fact, rushing often leads to mistakes that slow progress. Efficient action means focusing your energy, completing each task well, and then moving forward.

When every action is guided by vision, filled with faith, and done with purpose, momentum builds. Over time, that momentum becomes visible wealth and opportunity. Inefficient actions cancel one another out and create frustration. Efficient actions build upon each other until results appear.

To act efficiently, stay centered on your vision. Let the picture of the life you are creating guide your energy. Then give your best to what is in front of you. This is how you align with God's power of abundance and allow it to flow into your life.

Think and Do

- Focus on quality. Instead of asking How much can I get done today? ask How well can I do each thing today?
- Do today's work today. Write down your tasks for the day and complete them fully without worrying about tomorrow.
- Connect each action to vision. Before starting a task, pause and remind yourself of your bigger goal. Then pour your energy into that single step, knowing it moves you closer to abundance.

Chapter 13:

Getting into the Right Business

Success often feels easier when your work matches your natural abilities. A person with musical talent may find teaching or performing more natural than running a machine shop. Someone skilled with their hands may excel in a trade. But talent alone does not guarantee wealth. Many gifted people remain poor, while others with average ability prosper. The difference is not talent but the way they think and act.

Your abilities are tools, but tools alone do not create wealth. Two people may own the same set of tools, yet one creates something valuable while the other does not. The true difference lies in how the tools are used. In the same way, your thoughts, focus, and will determine whether you grow rich.

It is often easier to succeed in a field you enjoy. Doing what excites you gives you energy and persistence. More importantly, a strong desire to do something is a sign that you already have the seeds of ability to succeed in it. God would not place the desire in you without also giving you the potential to grow into it.

If you are not yet in the work you truly want, do not be discouraged. Even a temporary job can serve as a stepping stone if you handle it in the Certain Way. What matters most is acting with faith and clarity where you are, while keeping your vision alive for where you want to be.

Do not rush or panic if you feel stuck. The power of abundance is unlimited, and opportunities will always appear.

The right path opens when you are prepared and focused. By living with vision, gratitude, and efficient action, you naturally move into the work that best fits your growth.

Think and Do

- Listen to your desires. Ask yourself: What kind of work excites me most? Write it down. Your desire points to hidden potential.
- Treat your current work as preparation. Even if your job feels temporary, do it in the Certain Way. See it as training for greater opportunities.
- Replace hurry with trust. When you feel impatient about your career, remind yourself: Abundance is unlimited. The right path is opening for me.

Chapter 14:

The Impression

of Increase

Every person is searching for growth more life, more joy, more opportunity. This is natural because life itself is always expanding. People are drawn to those who make them feel that being around them will help them grow. For this reason, one of the most powerful things you can do is to give everyone you meet the impression of increase.

The impression of increase means that in every interaction, whether in business or daily life, you leave others with the sense that life feels bigger and brighter because of their connection with you. Even small moments a kind word, a helpful suggestion, or a simple exchange can carry the feeling of growth and possibility.

This impression does not come from showing off or pretending to be more than you are. It comes from genuinely living in alignment with abundance. When you believe in growth for yourself and others, people sense it. They feel uplifted, and they want to stay connected with you.

This principle reflects how God designed abundance to work. The power of abundance always creates more life, more opportunity, and more energy. When you align yourself with this law by being a source of increase for others, you place yourself in harmony with creation itself.

This also protects you from selfishness. If your goal is to dominate others or prove yourself superior, you will slip back into competition.

True abundance is not about controlling people but about helping them grow. By becoming a source of increase, you open the way for greater wealth to flow to you and through you.

Think and Do

- Lift others up. In each interaction, ask yourself: Am I leaving this person with the feeling that life is bigger because of me?
- Add value in small ways. Offer encouragement, share knowledge, or give more than expected. Even small actions create the impression of increase.
- Check your motives. Before making a decision, pause and ask: Does this action help others grow, or is it only about me? Choose growth.

Chapter 15:

The Advancing Person

The principles of abundance apply to every kind of work and every kind of person. Whether you are a teacher, a doctor, a worker, or a business owner, the key to success is the same: become an advancing person. An advancing person is someone who lives with faith, acts with purpose, and gives others the impression of increase wherever they go.

People are naturally drawn to advancing individuals. A teacher who believes in growth inspires students to learn. A doctor who carries a vision of health attracts people who want healing. Even someone working in an office or factory who shows energy and progress will stand out and draw new opportunities.

Being an advancing person is not about waiting for others to notice you. It is about knowing within yourself that you are growing and acting in ways that reflect it. Employers may not reward you right away, but the power of abundance always responds. When you carry yourself as someone advancing, the right doors open—if not in your current role, then in a new and better one.

This principle is especially important for those who feel stuck in limited jobs. Your current position does not decide your future. What matters is that you do your work in the Certain Way, with vision and faith in who you are becoming. When you live this way, you cannot be held back. Abundance will always create paths forward for someone who refuses to stop advancing.

The advancing person becomes a magnet for success. By living with gratitude, growth, and purpose, you align yourself with God's power of abundance. People sense it, opportunities appear, and wealth flows naturally into your life.

Think and Do

- Adopt the advancing mindset. Each morning, say: I am advancing. Every step I take today moves me forward.
- Bring increase to your work. No matter what you do, look for ways to perform with more energy, focus, and purpose than expected.
- See yourself growing. Picture the future version of yourself—stronger, wiser, and wealthier—and act today as if you are already becoming that person.

Chapter 16:

Cautions and

Final Observations

Some people doubt that there is a science to getting rich. They believe wealth is limited, or that powerful systems and groups control all the opportunities. But the truth is this: no system, authority, or circumstance can keep you poor if you think and act in the Certain Way.

Abundance is not created through struggle or competition. It flows through creativity, gratitude, faith, and purposeful action. When people live by these principles, they rise above limitations. And when enough people do this together, even whole societies begin to shift toward greater opportunity.

The greatest danger is not outside you but within you. Doubt, fear, and competitive thinking are what pull people off course. If you believe resources are limited, or that someone else must lose for you to win, you cut yourself off from the unlimited supply God created. If you complain, focus on failure, or speak discouraging words, you weaken your vision and slow your progress.

Instead, hold firm to the truth that life is always advancing. Challenges will appear, but each one carries the potential to make you stronger. What looks like failure may simply be the power of abundance redirecting you to something greater. Gratitude and faith keep you steady in these moments, reminding you that abundance never runs out.

You do not need to master every philosophy or study endless methods. The principles of abundance are simple: think clearly, hold your vision with faith, act with purpose, and stay grateful. That is enough. If you live this way consistently, your success is certain.

Think and Do

- Guard your thoughts. Each time doubt appears, replace it with this truth: The power of abundance is unlimited. I am creating my wealth now.
- Speak growth. Avoid complaining or focusing on decline. Choose words that affirm opportunity, progress, and increase.

Chapter 17:

The Big Summary

The science of getting rich can be summed up in a few simple truths. First, there is a creative power in life the power of abundance that God designed to respond to thought and action. Everything you see today, and everything you hope to create, flows from this power.

Second, your thoughts are the key. When you hold a clear vision of what you want, strengthened by faith and gratitude, you impress that vision onto the power of abundance. This sets in motion the process that brings your desire into reality.

Third, abundance is never created through fear or competition. It comes through creation. Wealth and opportunity are not limited. When you align yourself with God's power of abundance and act in the Certain Way, you draw from an unlimited supply.

Fourth, action is essential. To receive what you envision, you must act where you are, with what you have. Each action should be purposeful, efficient, and guided by your vision. When you give more in value than you take, you move yourself and others forward at the same time.

Finally, gratitude holds it all together. Gratitude keeps you connected to the source of wealth and focused on increase. A grateful heart strengthens your faith, builds confidence, and draws more good into your life.

Anyone who follows these principles will grow rich. The level of wealth you experience depends on the clarity of your vision, the strength of your purpose, the depth of your faith, and the consistency of your gratitude.

The Certain Way is not complicated. It is a way of thinking, acting, and living that is available to everyone. When you align your heart with peace, your mind with clarity, and your actions with purpose, you live by faith—the original mindset. And when you live this way, abundance is not only possible, it is inevitable.
